FROM GEN. BURNSIDE'S ARMY.

Sturgis' Division Crossing the Rappahannock on Saturday.

An Abortive Rebel Attempt on the Subsistence Train.

IMPORTANT GENERAL ORDERS.

The Army Divided Into Three Grand Divisions.

The Right Commanded by Gen. Sumner, the Left by Gen. Franklin, and the Centre by Gen. Hooker.

A Reserve Division Commanded by General Sigel.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Nov. 16.

A dispatch from Headquarters Army of the Potomac, dated this morning, says there was nothing important to communicate.

ATTACK ON STURGIS' SUPPLY TRAIN.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Nov. 16.

While Gen. Sturgis's Division was crossing the Rappahannock, near Sulphur Springs, on Saturday, his supply train, in the rear of the division, was attacked by about five hundred rebels with artillery. His force immediately turned and drove them off, taking a number of prisoners, and losing only a few horses killed by their artillery.

IMPORTANT ORDERS FROM GEN. BURNSIDE.

HEADQUARTERS ON THE ARMY OVER RAPPAHANNOCK, NEAR WARRENTON, VA., Friday, Nov. 14, 1862.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 184.—First—The organization of a portion of this army into three grand divisions is hereby announced. These grand divisions will be formed and commanded as follows:

The Second and Ninth Corps will form the right Grand Division, and will be commanded by Maj.-Gen. E. V. SUMNER.

The First and Sixth Corps will form the left Grand Division, and will be commanded by Maj.-Gen. W. B. FRANKLIN.

The Third and Fifth Corps will form the centre Grand Division, and will be commanded by Maj.-Gen. Joseph HOOKER.

The Eleventh Corps, with such other troops as may hereafter be assigned to it, will constitute a reserve force, under command of Maj.-Gen. Sigel.

A brigade of cavalry and further details will be announced in further orders.

Second—In accordance with instructions from the Department, the Commanders of these Grand Divisions will have power to double such questions relating to the interior management of their commands, as are now forwarded to these headquarters for final action.

Maj.-Gen. Sumner will exercise all the powers in respect to his command above assigned, as to the Commanders of the Grand Divisions.

Third—The cases which can be fully decided by the Department of Washington they will forward directly to that Department without reference to these headquarters.

All matters relating to movements of troops, together with returns, reports, &c., will be forwarded to these headquarters as usual.

The Commanders of these Grand Divisions will parade with these their respective Staffs.

Fourth—The senior officers of the Second, Third, Fifth and Sixth Corps will take the command of these corps, and will forward to these headquarters a list of recommendations of officers to fill their Staffs.

Fifth—Brig.-Gen. S. WILLIAMS, A. A. G., is appointed Inspector-General of the Adjutant-General's Department of this Army.

Sixth—Lieut.-Col. JESSE A. HARRIS, Aid-de-Camp and acting A. A. G., will act as Assistant Inspector-General in the same department.

The heads of the various Staff Departments at these headquarters, other than the Adjutant-General and his deputy, will remain as heretofore until further orders.

Seventh—Lieut.-Col. LEWIS RICHMOND, Assistant Adjutant-General, is announced as a General at these headquarters.

Eighth—All orders conflicting with these are hereby rescinded. By command of Major-General BURNSIDE.

E. WILLIAMS, Assistant Adjutant-General.

INTERESTING FROM KEY WEST.

A Half-Dozen More Prizes for Adjudication—A New Mail Line—The Yellow Fever—Contributions for the Soldiers—Col. Morgan Vindicated, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KEY WEST, Fla., Sunday, Nov. 9, 1862.

The United States steamer Kensington, Acting Master FERNANDO CROGZIN, arrived on the 6th, from a cruise in the Gulf, having on board a small cargo of sugar, captured on a small coaster off Louisiana, and reports the capture of five other vessels, all of which are now on the way here for adjudication.

Another prize came in on the 7th, the English brig Perseus, of Nassau, N. P., bound from Cienfuegos, Cuba, to New-Orleans, with an assorted cargo of liquors, wines, dry goods &c. She was captured off the Sabine River, Texas, in the act of procuring a load cargo, by the United States Navy transport Constitution, Capt. ——, and sent here in charge of Acting Master CHARLES W. LEE. The cargo cost $12,000. The Constitution has just arrived, and will carry this mail for the North.

The steamer Big Bee, Capt. DERRY, arrived on the 8th from New-York, and was greeted with great joy as the first vessel of what they to expected to become a regular line touching here, both going and coming from Havana. The mails sent for this place by the steamer Kennebec, to Havana, two days before the sailing of the Big Bee, are not yet received. It is earnestly hoped that the Mail Department will appreciate that Key West is not a traitors' nest, plotting their evil designs against the Government, but is under the control of loyal men, old residents, who have served freely and unflinchingly for their flag and country through all the trying scenes of the past, and will still be found true to their duties in hearty cooperation with the military command. The combined wants of the army, the navy and the citizens, call loudly for a direct and speedy mail, and we bespeak a liberal contract for the proprietors of the Big Bee.

The United States steamer Santee de Cuba, Capt. [illegible], arrived on the 6th from a cruise. Officers and crew all well.

The United States bark Dacotah, Acting Volunteer Lieut. WEBER, arrived on the 6th from the blockade of Apalachicola. All well.

The Bilboa cotton frigate is in the Key West.

New Era, of the 8th:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW ERA:

As there seems to be a great misunderstanding in the North as regards the health of this place, I am happy to say that the island is now healthy. We have had no case of fever for three weeks, and I think I can safely say we will be entirely free from it for this season. There is no danger in steamers stopping here now. Very truly yours,

W. F. CORNICK,
Assistant Surgeon U. S. A.

The citizens of this place have contributed about $1,200 for the relief of families of volunteers in the United States Army, and this from a small population. One hundred discover patriotic motive. There is one very devoted loyal woman—an old resident, but of foreign birth—who, unauthorized and entirely from her own impulse, by her individual labor and efforts, collected from her own sex in small sums the amount of $20 77. Such startling examples of patriotism are refreshing. May she long live under the flag she loves.

I have just been shown an article in a New-York paper of the 27th October, abusing Col. MORGAN commanding this post. Col. MORGAN has never freed any emancipated freeing slaves, nor authorized them to occupy any vacant property, whether of loyalists or rebels. He has simply carried out the orders of his superiors in command by taking such negroes as were wanted for labor, in coins where he has taken both bond and free. He has refused to interfere between master and slave, except in cases where it has been necessary to preserve the peace, wherein he has protected the negro from personal violence. Loyal men have received back their slaves from the Quartermaster's service upon representation of their bond of their services, and there is no disposition to complain of Col. MORGAN's course, except by those rebel sympathizers who, failing within the category of the Proclamation, assume that they have not aided or assisted in rebellion. Col. MORGAN is no Abolitionist; he is a soldier, zealous in the discharge of his duty to his Government, and loyal men here are protected and vouchsafed in his administration of affairs. He has a keen scent for traitors, and failing to wheedle or cajole him, they are now attempting to bewilder and drive him. I trust they will fail in the latter as in the former. Loyal men are satisfied, and feel much more secure under such an officer than one of less marked characteristics. F.

WEST COAST OF FLORIDA.

The Blockade of Tampa Bay—Description of the Coast—Wretchedness of the Inhabitants—A Small Bombardment, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

UNITED STATES BARK PURSUIT, BLOCKADING TAMPA BAY, FLA., Friday, Nov. 7, 1862.

This place has been blockaded since last November by the United States bark Ethan Allen, assisted of late by the United States schooner Beauregard, which will remain here. Our ship came in here the last of September to await supplies from Key West, when we received orders to remain on this station and relieve the Ethan Allen, which was ordered to St. Joseph's Bay on blockading duty.

The Pursuit left New-York last January, and up to the time of coming in here, has been allowed a roving commission, and with considerable success, having captured several valuable prizes. We are lying up the bay far enough to guard the entrance to Manatee River, as well as the passage up to the town of Tampa, which is thirty-five miles distant.

To the west side of the main ship entrance (north channel) to this bay is Egmont Key; to the east, Mullet Key. These keys are small, low, sandy islands, covered with a rank undergrowth of prairie grass, the palmetto tree and a few stunted pines. The latter key is not inhabited. On the extreme sandy point of Egmont stands the new light-house, one hundred and ten feet above the level of the sea. The light has not been lighted since the rebels destroyed the apparatus last year—another mark of Southern vandalism. The keeper's house is a comfortable two-story brick building, with several out-buildings. They are occupied at present by some dozen contrabands and four white refugees, who have escaped from the main land. The contrabands are engaged in clearing the ground and planting sweet potatoes.

Some three weeks ago, three white men, refugees from Southern tyranny, escaped from Tampa in a small boat, and came down to us for protection. They are men of intelligence, and state that they have been using every means to escape for the last nine months, but their Union sentiments were so well known that every attempt proved abortive.

One of them, who formerly belonged to the United States Army, was put in charge of the guns of a small mud battery near the town, to prevent him from escaping, but he was all ready to spike the guns in case of an attack by our boats. The other two have been compelled to assist in running sugar from Manatee River to Tampa, since last July. By pretending to have changed their feelings and espoused the cause of the South, they were allowed to load the boat with empty barrels, as usual, to go for sugar, and leave alone. On their way down the bay they stopped for their friend, with whom they had made arrangements previously, in case they succeeded. When they came alongside they gave three hearty cheers for liberty and the Union.

They gave a sad account of things in this part of the South; that they had to live on corn, sweet potatoes and fresh meat, without salt enough to cure the latter, this useful article bringing $20, $30, and even $40 per bushel, when it can be had.

They say there are 125 soldiers at Tampa, and another company expected soon to join them; that they are obstructing the channel, by sinking old hulks, to prevent the Yankee gunboats from coming up to the town. They have two small fortifications, mounting ten old 24-pounders, and are using every means within their power to be prepared for an attack, which they are expecting daily.

The files of Southern papers, but more especially Floridian papers, which they brought, give a still darker picture of affairs. One hundred and eight thousand men have deserted from their army since the war began, and it is with the greatest difficulty they can carry out the provisions of the late conscription act.

It is almost impossible to subsist the army, the severe drought having cut off the corn crop at least one-half. They curse the Nationals most bitterly for eating up all the wooden ware, meat, cattle, &c., as they advance into their territory. Next after the food question, clothing the men seems to be the greatest difficulty, as the cold weather approaches. The following estimate of a soldier's outfit for the coming Winter, every article of which is indispensable, is given by the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Daily Rebel: Fur cap, $5; one jacket, $25; one pair pants, $20; one pair shoes, $10; two pair socks, (wool,) $10; two pair drawers, $6. Total, $76.

We had a little taste of excitement last week. The schooner Beauregard, commanded by Acting Master ARMOUR, with Acting Master LAWSON and a boat's crew from our vessel, went up the bay, ostensibly to gather oysters. They arrived at the oyster ground just before dark, which is above Gadsden's Point, and about eight miles below Tampa. From there they could distinguish the tops of houses in the town.

The temptation to have a nearer view was too strong to be resisted, so they kept on until the lights could be seen plainly, when they anchored for the night. As soon as it was light enough in the morning to see, they found they were about two miles below the town, and that there was an unusual excitement on shore. Nearly abreast of them were several companies of soldiers drawn up in line on the beach, with fixed bayonets. Near by was a tall flagstaff from which floated a large secession flag. While our friends were admiring this parade, going up, as they supposed, for their special benefit, they were awakened to their position by the report of one of the twenty-fours from the fortification, and saw the shot strike in the water at least one mile short of them. This was followed by another, with like success.

The officers of the schooner, thinking it would be a breach of etiquette not to return the salute, trained the 30-pound Parrott rifle, which is a part of her armament, on the battery, and fired. The shell struck, and exploded in a small wooden building in the rear of the fortification, knocking it into splinters. There was no more firing from the fort. The next shell struck just in front of the line of soldiers, and, bursting at the same time, it plowed its way right and left through them, causing those that were able to take to the bush in double-quick time.

After dropping some fifteen shells into the fort and woods, but receiving no response, they concluded the fun was all up in that vicinity; and, gallantly dipping the American ensign to the apparently deserted fort and town, they left for the oyster ground, where they took on board twenty-five barrels of fine oysters, and returned to their old anchorage, having been absent only two days.

I trust the time is not far distant when we shall have the opportunity of making them another and still more effectual visit. PERSONNE.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

General Order from the President.

A More Strict Observance of the Sabbath in the Army and Navy Enjoined.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Nov. 16.

The following General Order has been issued respecting the observance of the Sabbath Day in the army and navy:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 16, 1862.

The President, Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy, desires and enjoins the orderly observance of the Sabbath by the officers and men in the military and naval service. The importance for man and beast of the prescribed weekly rest; the sacred rights of Christian soldiers and sailors; a becoming deference to the best sentiment of a Christian people, and a due regard for the Divine will, demand that Sunday labor in the army and navy be reduced to the measure of strict necessity. The discipline and character of the National forces should not suffer, nor the cause they defend be imperiled by the profanation of the day or name of the Most High. At this time of public distress, adopting the words of Washington, in 1776, "Men may find enough to do in the service of God and their country, without abandoning themselves to vice and immorality." The first order issued by the Father of his country after the Declaration of Independence, indicates the spirit in which our institutions were founded, and should ever be defended. "The General hopes and trusts that every officer and man will endeavor to live and act as becomes a Christian soldier, defending the dearest rights and privileges of his country."

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Nov. 16.

THE LATE ARRESTS.

The officers of Gen. MCCLELLAN's Staff, Col. COLBURN and Capt. DUANE, who were brought here under arrest, are charged with absence without leave, the use of language disrespectful to their commanding officer, and conduct prejudicial to maintenance of order and discipline in the army. Col. COLBURN to-day rode over into Virginia with some friends.

GEN. FREMONT.

Gen. FREMONT has reported for duty, and is directed to remain here awaiting orders. Late advices from St. Louis state that his presence is again required there in connection with the trial of Gen. MCKINSTRY.

FOR THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

One thousand convalescents and exchanged prisoners were yesterday sent to the Army of the Potomac.

THE EFFICIENCY OF NEGRO TROOPS.

Very late advices from Kansas and Florida, give the details of engagements between the rebels and United States negro troops, in which the latter behaved with distinguished coolness and courage, and achieved decided successes. The result of these experimental fights is such as inspires the rebels with indescribable terror, and bids fair to work important changes in the policy of the Government toward the negroes.

CONSOLIDATION OF THE INDIANS.

Senator FESSENDEN has memorialized the Government in favor of the consolidation of all the Western Indians in one nation in the Indian territory.

FRAUDS ON THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

It is understood, that as soon as Congress shall meet, a committee will be called for to investigate certain matters connected with the treasury note issues. It is stated, that the contractors are charging and receiving the highest price for a very worthless article of paper, and that in various other ways the Government is being constantly swindled. The quality of the paper used in the postage stamp currency is execrable; the engravings of all the notes is, if possible, worse; and instead of being models of art, they are a disgrace to the age and country. Engravings are palmed upon the department as having been executed with the geometric lathe, which are actually produced by what is called a Rose; a machine which is in the hands of all who manufacture jewelry, or practice counterfeiting on a large scale. The designs are from old dies, that have already been multiplied by the hundred. The ink is claimed to be patented, and into marked on the notes; but if the ink is green, all who see the notes are not; and a recent test by experienced chemists, has proved that a fraud is perpetrated on the Government, in the use of a spurious article, for which the law imposes heavy penalties.

Secretary CHASE may not suspect duplicity in those to whom he has given his confidence, and who maintain their positions by the aid of social and personal influences. Something must be on the tapis at this time; as parties connected with the paper and note contracts are in Washington, apparently much dismayed in the Hon. Secretary. It is rumored that a contract for paper has been made with another party, who offered a really superior article at lower prices, and that the old contractors are now moving heaven and earth to get the contract modified and the old order reinstated.

MRS. BRINSMADE AND HER FRIENDS.

A great deal of unknown and mischief being given to the circumstances of a lady calling herself Mrs. BRINSMADE having been imprisoned in New-York, and different officials appearing anxious to shift from themselves the responsibility of her arrest, it may be well enough to state that the individual in question is not one whose personal character justifies the excessive and misplaced sympathy which has been lavished upon her by the chivalric knights of Democracy now shivering lances in her behalf.

Mrs. BRINSMADE—to use the alias she most affects—came here from New-Orleans after that city had the misfortune to find a ruler who refused to consider treason sanctified by the sex of a petticoat. Her associations and conduct were of a character the most suspicious; and she was followed to this city by an officer of Superintendent KENNEDY, who finally executed her arrest. He conveyed her to the office of Chief Detective BAKER, who declined to become a party, unnecessarily, to the act of an officer independent in his authority; and after exhausting all the ready resources of female persuasion, she was finally carried back to New-York and placed in prison. The circumstances of her release have been widely published; and Mr. KENNEDY has manifested an undue anxiety to cast the responsibility on the War Department here. But that department, as well as Col. BLIGH, one of its agents, has refused from first to last to sanction, condemn, or in any way interfere in the case.

That she is a woman of most dangerous character is believed by all who had an opportunity of witnessing her operations in this city, as well as that she deserves no sympathy on the score of injured reputation. Whether Superintendent KENNEDY should not rather have returned her at once to New-Orleans, is a question of judgment; but that the Interrogatories of her career have deprived the rebels of one of their most effective spies, seems too plain for reasonable doubt.

INDIAN OUTRAGES ON THE UPPER MISSOURI.

Intelligence has been received by Commissioner DEAN of the recommencement of Indian hostilities along the Upper Missouri. A short time since, a boat containing a number of settlers from the neighborhood of Fort Benton were attacked, about 180 miles below Fort Berthold, by a large band of "Yanktonis" and "Blackfoot Sioux," who fired volley after volley into the boat, wounding five persons, several severely. The Indians posted themselves on the bank, in a very narrow part of the river, where they knew the boat would have to pass within a few yards of the shore. The persons in the boat made a most spirited resistance, and finally succeeded in making their escape, after killing and wounding a number of the savages. It is considered very unsafe to venture down the Missouri in an open boat, as the banks of the river swarm with hostile Indians, who it is supposed, are congregating there preparatory to a grand onslaught in the Spring on the frontier settlements in Dacotah and Nebraska. Every precaution, we learn, is being taken to render the forts on the frontier capable of resisting the anticipated attack, which, from the number of Indians preparing to engage in it, will be the most sanguinary and determined ever made in the Northwest.

FROM ARIZONA.

Letters received here from Arizona state that Gen. CARLETON, with the main body of the troops under his command, had gone to Santa Fé. Major GRIER is in command of the Western Division of Arizona, and has established his headquarters at Tucson. Major FERGUSON has gone on an expedition to explore the route between Tucson and Port of Liberty, recently opened on the eastern shore of the Gulf of California, near the mouth of the Colorado. The route, when opened, will be used by the Government for transportation purposes.

A report had reached Los Angelos that a band of rebel guerrillas, under the leadership of a notorious outlaw named CUNNINGHAM, had got into the mining district, and were at La Paz, committing outrages upon the inhabitants. It is thought, however, that the miners will be able to take care of themselves, and either kill or capture the whole band.

The news from the Colorado mining district is very encouraging. Large numbers of people are on their way to the mines, which are said to be very rich. Several extensive silver veins have been discovered a few miles from the river. Native sulphur and saltpetre have also been discovered in large quantities.

NORTHERN COTTON.

The Commissioner of Agriculture has received samples of cotton grown in Pennsylvania, New-Jersey and Southern Illinois. The samples, though not as long in fibre, as the Sea Island, are of excellent quality, and superior to the India cotton.

Governor ANDREW, of Massachusetts, arrived here on Saturday. The object of his visit is in relation to obtaining discharges for sick soldiers belonging to Massachusetts regiments, and to urge upon the Government the necessity of providing adequate defences for Boston harbor.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Nov. 16.

CAPTURE OF A REBEL MAIL IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

Navy Department dispatches contain an account of valuable service rendered by Acting Master's Mate JAMES J. RUSSELL, of the bark Restless. He left Bull's Island on the 5th inst., in a small boat with two contrabands, armed, for Jewey's Landing, Palmetto River, S. C., for the purpose of intercepting the mail between Charleston and Georgetown. He and his friends secreted themselves, and waited for the carrier, who approached in a sulky. Suddenly coming from his concealment, he commanded him to halt by authority of the United States Government. Two mail bags were secured. The carrier said he was glad to be captured, as he had long been wishing for an opportunity to leave the place. The party barely escaped the rebel pickets, and returned in safety to the ship.

AN ANNOYANCE.

The officer of Internal Revenue is much annoyed at the continued receipt of letters from Assistant Assessors, deputy Collectors and others, asking information regarding business connected with their offices. No attention can be given to their inquiries, as application for information concerning business should be made by subordinate officials to their principal, and not to the Internal Revenue Bureau.

NEWS FROM NASHVILLE.

A Movement on the Murfreesboro Road—Morgan's Guerrillas, &c.

NASHVILLE, Sunday, Nov. 16.

Gen. SILL's Division marched, this morning, on the Murfreesboro Road.

Gen. CRITTENDEN's Division is at Silver Springs, twelve miles from Lebanon.

A part of MORGAN's force is at Lebanon; a portion came within two miles of Gen. CRITTENDEN's camp. Supplies from the country for the city have greatly increased. The weather is wet and likely to continue so.

LOUISVILLE, Sunday, Nov. 16.

Special dispatches from Nashville for the past week are almost wholly unreliable.

A dispatch from Nashville yesterday, contains an account of five murders; two of saloon-keepers, who refused to sell liquor to soldiers; two of soldiers, cause unknown, and one of a negro. The City Marshal was also assaulted and badly beaten.

ST. JOHN, N. F., Saturday, Nov. 15.

The steamship Etna, from Liverpool on the 6th, off Queenstown on the 6th inst., passed Cape Race, en route to New-York, at 1 o'clock this afternoon. She was boarded by the news yacht of the Associated Press, and a summary of her news obtained.

The dates per the Etna are four days later than those per the Europa at Halifax.

The steamship City of New-York, from New-York, arrived at Liverpool on the 4th inst.

The steamship Norman, from Quebec, arrived at Liverpool on the 5th inst.

The political news per the Etna is not of any particular importance.

The Etna reports that she has experienced very severe weather during the voyage.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The London Times again adverts to the action of the New-York Chamber of Commerce touching the steamer Alabama, and denies that any blame can be attached to England. It says further ship-yards are open to all. England does not fit out ships of war, but sells their component parts to all comers. The Times then quotes from the message of President FILLMORE to Congress in 1850, to show what American considered her neutrality, and what she was justified in doing during the Russian war. The Times adds: "England has never gone beyond or fully up to the bounds of the American theory, which is perfectly sound, and English neutrals sit as disciples at the feet of President FILLMORE."

The London Daily News has a very different argument. It says that the Government cannot be answerable for every paltry infraction of obligations which its subjects might be tempted to commit. Looking at the grave charges made against LAIRD's ship-building yard, on the Mersey, where a navy is to be used against a friendly power is being built, after England has declared her neutrality, is not the Government bound either to terminate this illegal state of things or to withdraw its Neutrality Proclamation.

The London Times has commenced the publication of "special correspondence" from Richmond. A letter dated Oct. 3, in which the writer appears strongly imbued with the spirit of the Secessionists, says: "They suffer terrible desolation, but their spirit of resistance is as high as ever."

The London Daily News furnishes evidence from Southern newspapers to show that their military resources are about exhausted, and that internal dissensions prevail.

JOHN BRIGHT, in a letter to WM. GURNEY JENKINS, expresses amazement at the idea of conciliation toward the South regarding Slavery. He says: "The North may separate from the South or fight out the contest and win, but to leave the slave still a slave will expose her to the contempt of the civilized world." He adds: "I applaud the Proclamation of President LINCOLN, as does every man in Europe who is not a foe to freedom, or moved by base hostility to the American Republic because it is a Republic, and a powerful one."

At a crowded meeting of the Metropolitan Institution of London, resolutions expressing sympathy with the North were adopted.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL, in a letter, expresses a strong hope that the Government will refrain from interference in case of a servile insurrection in the Southern States.

It was rumored that Lord ELGIN had retired from the Governorship of India, owing to the climate not agreeing with him, and that the Duke of Argyle would succeed him.

The Great Exhibition closed without any formal ceremonies. The attendance and total receipts both exceed those of the Great Exhibition of 1851.

GREAT NAVAL PROBLEM SOLVED.

The Trial Trip of the Passaic—Grand Success—A Gun can be Fired Inside a Turret—Never Miss Work a Single Revolution—Terrible Force.

On Saturday the naval enthusiasts in this city were the witnesses of a grand [illegible] trial trip of the new iron-clad [illegible] having on her grand 15-inch gun built on the plan of the working of Mr. ERICSSON's new [illegible] handling the gun, whereby the number of men required is very materially reduced.

At 10 o'clock the [illegible] Among those on board were Admiral [illegible] Superintendent of Iron-clads; [illegible] SENEES, Lawrence and Stevens; Capt. [illegible] commander the Passaic, and the representatives of the leading journals.

At a quarter past 10 the ropes were loosened, the steam-tug E. [illegible] pushed the vessel to the [illegible] and the engineer of the Passaic [illegible] the cleaning out of the boiler, [illegible] Passaic was making seven miles an hour [illegible] her machinery, barely stirring. Hitherto she had hardly done that at her best.

THE FIRST SHOT.

At 12 o'clock we arrived at the Palisades, and the first shot was fired. It struck about 300 yards from the vessel in the water, ricocheted off, and flew into the woods of the Palisades, kicking up more dust than a squadron of irregular cavalry. Every one rushed to the turret. Was it there? What part burst? Who killed? No one—nothing broken—the turret was there, as strong and solid as the rock of Gibraltar. Hence was manifested inside—as was declared, the concussion was not felt any more than the Capitol of an old-fashioned 24-pounder feels it on board the old-fashioned frigate.

The very first fire, then, results in no couple to speak of, and is universally conceded, and has given pleasure of a grand time. The first charge was stated of 20 lbs. of powder, and a hollow shot, (20 lbs.) fired out of the 15-inch gun. It reached [illegible] inches.

THE SECOND SHOT.

This also was fired out of the 15-inch gun, there being really no need of discharging the 11-inch. The first that having proved the practicability of the principle, the entire change of all the [illegible] now put in. Capt. DRAYTON pulled the trigger; [illegible] the echoing of the Palisades rang out. The smoke and smoke [illegible] and the shot—a hollow one—buried itself quite in the beach.

THE THIRD SHOT.

A full 30-pound was put in, and the 30-pound hollow shot. The ball struck the water in [illegible] that these behemoths [illegible] not any but the one great principle.

There were three grand results.

First—A gun may be fired inside a turret.

Second—In order to appreciate the [illegible] second result, it should be known that the Armstrong guns in England have been condemned for war on shipboard, chiefly because a sufficient number of men could not be placed in the turret to work them. Twenty-five failed to do it absolutely, and the Armstrong gun weighs [illegible] tons. The Ericsson four men worked a 15-inch gun, which weighs [illegible] tons. Here is, of itself, a revolution. Approach [illegible] for which history furnishes no parallel. The Ericsson's 11-inch gun, when worked with eight men, [illegible] deemed a miracle of mechanic locomotion. Yet here is a gun, over 20,000 pounds heavier, worked by half the number of men. And next week Mr. WORTHEN will put a 15,000 pound gun on board the Passaic, which will require hardly more than [illegible] even the Monitor [illegible] while the 20,000 pound gun of the Passaic is served by half men.

Third—The third result is a very important one. It is the immobility of the Passaic, and consequently of her sister ships, in a heavy tide. A deaf man could not tell yesterday that the vessel stirred. The writer held a full glass of water in the hand, while balls raps were bounding over the deck, and the liquid never even trembled. Water-break [illegible] the bow margin of the craft and splash to [illegible] foam about the deck. They have no ball to [illegible] so high bulwarks; even the turret presents no [illegible] to angry Neptune, at every side. So much for the results.

RECAPITULATION.

The following is a tabular recapitulation of the experiments:

	Charge.	Shot.	Charge.	Shot.
First shot...	20 lbs. (hollow)	20 lbs.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Second shot...	20 lbs. (hollow)	20 lbs.	9 lb.	[illegible]
Third shot...	20 lbs.	20 lbs.	20 lb.	[illegible]

THE GUERRILLAS IN KENTUCKY.

Dashing Expedition Against Guerrillas—Rebels Out Up and Routed.

[illegible] Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.

BRIDGEPORT, Ind., Wednesday, Nov. 12.

The expedition which [illegible] day, the 10th, under [illegible] Pennsylvania [illegible] lands that have so long been [illegible] Northwestern Kentucky, have [illegible] cent. The force was divided into [illegible] East force was commanded [illegible]

Major FLETCHER, of the Fourth Ohio Cavalry, came on with [illegible] of horse thieves, at Salem, [illegible] ing, severely and mortally wounding the [illegible] Capt. GUEST [illegible] and Lieut. SMITH each captured [illegible] ers, and Capt. KELLY with forty men chased into [illegible] one hundred and fifty guerrillas, who did not [illegible] fire a gun. ZELLY's force wounded a number and took [illegible] prisoners. The rebels taken up Major FLETCHER are the same that crossed into Indiana at Westville, Franklin, some days since. All the horses and arms taken by these guerrillas. These guerrillas are undoubtedly the [illegible] cavalry have been picking them up through the [illegible] and swamps since the fight. We have [illegible] are including one captain and three lieutenants, seventy-five horses, and a large number of arms. Our forces are still in pursuit; the country [illegible] will push them to the wall and pin them to it.

[illegible]

[illegible] Nov. 2.—The [illegible] Antonio, Rodriguez, was boarded at Newport, where she had been lying under orders for some time, and went to Havana, where she completed her outfit and sailed for the coast of Africa, Oct. 1.

[illegible] was seized at this port, on suspicion.

Dec. 1.—There vessels beside the Ardennes—the Alerina, brig Falmouth, Capt. SAINAS, and the Express—sailed from HAVANA, on slave voyages.

Dec. 15.—The bark Williams, Capt. FINES, landed a cargo of negroes on the coast of Cuba.

The schooner Williams, FOLSTAFF, master, was seized and taken to Key West with a cargo of negroes. The vessel was condemned and sold [illegible] was again seized at Porto au Prince, Feb. 16, 1861.

The Lucy Johnson, from New-London, put into this port in distress, bearing a slave outfit, and was seized.

At this time the trials of slavers were likely to come up, and Judge SMALLEY delivered an able charge to the jury, setting forth that it was the duty of all officers to make active exertions to suppress the trade. Notwithstanding this, and the fact that several vessels and persons engaged in the trade were under arrest, none came to trial.

Jan. 1, 1861.—There were ten slavers in this port under detention—the schooners Weather Gage, Cogswell and Josephine, barks J. J. Cobb, C. E. Tay, Cora and Kate, the brigs Achora and Falmouth, and ship Erie. The Storm King and Trifoin were at Norfolk; the Cygnet and Wildfloma at Mobile. The schooners Wanderer, Lyon, and steamer City of Norfolk, were at Havana. The Atlanta, Capt. SILVA; bark Buckeye, Capt. BOOTH; ship Brutus, and schooner Marguerite, Capt. BARRETT, were still on the Coast of Africa. The bark White Cloud, Capt. HAYES; bark Antelope, Capt. JOHNSON, and Iowa, Capt. JOHNSON, had all taken in cargoes, but had not made head from [illegible]

The schooner Josephine, Capt. COSTER, and bark C. E. Tay, Capt. TRAINOR, were bonded and sailed for Africa. The bark Cora was condemned and sold, and again fitted out, and seized under suspicion, March 6, and afterward bonded and sailed.

Feb. 21.—Judge BARRS condemned the bark Kate, deciding that the parties claiming vessels were bound to clear them from suspicion to save them.

April 14.—The schooner Wells, Capt. WELLS, was seized at Greenport by the Custom-house officers.

April 18.—The bark Sarah, COUILLARD, Master, sailed for Cape Palmas, but was overhauled before getting to sea, and afterward condemned, appealed and bonded, and sailed. The bark Coleman, Capt. MONROE, cleared for Elizabethport, N. J., at the same time, and sailed for Africa. Four other vessels were in port, fitting out, at this time, and soon afterward sailed for Cadiz, to complete their outfit—the portion taken in here not being sufficient to warrant their arrest under the then existing law.

This abuse on extensive trade, with but little effort to suppress it.

The utmost watchfulness of armed vessels was not sufficient to deter the fitting out of vessels, nor prevent a large number of them from taking in cargoes and escaping. In fact, the very spirit and letter of the law, paying a bounty of $25 for every recaptured negro, is for the interest of these vessels to permit slavers to take in cargoes for the purpose of capturing them. After the cargo was shipped the interest of the slaver was not to be caught, of course. The only means of suppressing the trade was to prevent vessels fitting out in any port, and to deal rigorously with parties interested in the trade, wherever they should be found.

The inauguration of the present Administration, with principles avowedly opposed to the increase of the African population in this country and of extending Slavery, although coming into power with a gigantic rebellion on its hands, had time, nevertheless, to displace officials derelict of their duty, and appoint others competent and disposed to energetically enforce laws for which they were appointed.

The result of this change has been amply apparent, and furnishes abundant evidence that the trade can be completely suppressed. It was from this port that a large proportion of the vessels sailed, and in this City that the extensive organizations for the protection of the traffic existed, and consequently attention was directed here for its suppression. The extent of the traffic offered an abundant field for the exercise of vigilence, not only in tracking out and arresting guilty parties, but in securing evidence sufficient to convict. In this it was often necessary to use a guilty party simply as a witness, as in the case of CRAWFORD, Captain of the City of Norfolk, who has just been used as a witness to convict HOEN, who fitted out the vessel.

Evidence could not easily be obtained, for, notwithstanding the number engaged and that the names were known, their liability to arrest prevented their staying in the City.

The vessels might be destroyed or sold to other parties, or their names changed so that they could not be easily recognized. The officers otherwise engaged, the seamen on board of other vessels or so scattered purposely or by accident, that recognition and arrests would be difficult. With all these difficulties the public will be surprised to learn that not two thousand negroes have been landed in Cuba during the past year, and these by vessels fitted at foreign ports, and that there are few if any vessels in this port, or other United States ports, fitting for that purpose, while but eight have sailed during the last eighteen months, and some of them now rot under embargoes at foreign ports. The eighth has not been heard from.

The tricks and subterfuges of the trade exceed that of all other kinds of commerce. In one instance the vessel would be fitted out in part as wholly, and clear for some port along the coast, and, when once at sea, "hard upon the helm," and stand away to the Congo. In other instances three or four vessels would sail ostensibly for a foreign port, and loaded each with such a portion of a slaver's outfit as would evade the law, and meet and exchange cargoes, fully equipping two or three of them for a voyage.

Cargoes of material are placed on board under false marks, and false invoices are made, while others go to Havana and a market, or close the coasting voyages.

An organization of slave traders has existed in this City from time immemorial, and one is known to exist in Havana with a capital of $2,000,000. One object of these associations is to protect those engaged in the trade and prevent [illegible]

[illegible] Newport, in April, 1861, who has been Deputy Surveyor for four years, and another four years Harbor Master, and who knows every merchant in South or Beaver streets, and every Captain and "reefer in the regular" [illegible] of the rebellion also naturally directed the attention of those of the South engaged in the trade to other affairs, and shut their ports against the traffic.

Several men and vessels were under arrest, but evidence was needed for their conviction. Several other vessels were on the coast of Africa, and the crews of former slavers scattered from the mouth of the Congo to all other ports, both foreign and at home.

Several seizures were made of slavers on the Coast of Africa—among them, the ship Nightingale, with 950 negroes on board, which were sent to Monrovia, while the Captain and a Spanish supercargo were allowed to escape; but the mates, HAYNES, WINSLOW and WHITEHOUSE, were sent with the vessel to this port for trial. Two of them have recently been bailed. June 30, 1861, the brig Fairy was seized off the coast of Africa with 550 negroes on board. About the same time a Spanish brig was seized in the River Pongas, and the brig Falmouth, Capt. SONAIS, on the coast, by a British steamer, and the Falmouth sent to this City, but the officers and crew went that way. As soon as appointed, Marshal MURRAY set about ferreting out these slave-traders, and soon had a large number under arrest, and was on track of others.

Among the first arrests was ALBERT HOEN, merchant, charged with fitting out the City of Norfolk, recently tried and convicted.

ARRESTS SINCE APRIL, 1861.

A nearly correct list of arrests since April, 1861, has been collected:

May 2.—Capt. CRAWFORD, of steamer City of Norfolk.

May 31.—The crew of the Bonita.

June 1.—Seven of the crew of the bark Cora.

July 11.—Capt. STEARNS and mate WILLIAMS, of the brig W. E. Kelby.

July 12.—Two of the crew of the brig Twim.

July 30.—Four of the crew of the brig Falmouth.

Aug. 10.—JOHN JAMES, mate of the brig Mary Francis, was arrested and turned over to the authorities at Boston on one charge, when he was examined and held to bail in $1,500. To obtain this bail he came to this City, and a meeting of the slavetraders was called and held at the Howard House. The money was raised and his bail indemnified, and, when released by the officer, again arrested by Marshal MURRAY, charged with a capital offence, but has since been set at liberty for want of evidence, and used as a witness.

Aug. 17.—J. A. MOCHADO, a confrère of the notorious Mr. WATSON, was arrested on charge of fitting out the Mary Francis, and held to bail.

Sept. 11.—GEORGE H. LAINES was arrested charged with fitting out the brig Falmouth, but discharged for want of evidence.

Sept. 19.—ERASTUS BOOTH, Captain of the bark Buckeye, arrested, but just acquitted for want of evidence.

Oct. 2.—The United States steamers Constellation and Mohican, of the African squadron, were boarded on arriving at port, and four of the crew of the Erie, under GORDON, and two others, were arrested.

Oct. 11.—GEORGE GRANT, mate of the bark Buckeye, was arrested in this City, and afterward escaped from an officer.

Oct. 14.—Sixteen of the crew of the Nightingale were taken from the storeship Relief, of the African squadron, as she came in. Three others were taken from another ship at Portsmouth, and one from the Mystic at Philadelphia, and two from another vessel at Brooklyn.

Nov. 13.—Eighteen of the officers and crew of the Augusta were taken at Greenport, L. I.—among them, Capt. A. OAKES SMITH, who has since been tried, convicted and escaped from the jail at Charlestown, Mass., and is now in Havana.

Nov. 29.—J. W. PISCHERY, charged with shipping the crew of the Augusta, discharged.

Dec. 5.—P. C. PIERSON, charged with fitting out the ship Brutus, and held to bail.

Jan. 3, 1862.—MORGAN FREDERICKS, Captain of the bark Cora, arrested at Brooklyn Navy-yard.

Sept. 18.—J. A. MOCHADO was arrested, examined and held to bail, and has since been arrested, and is now in Fort Lafayette.

Sept. 18.—Captain of the brig Mary Francis was arrested.

Aside from these, several arrests have been made, of which we have not the data, both in this City and others.

In August, 1861, the Marshals of Boston, Philadelphia, and New-York, met to concert plans for a more efficient effort to suppress the trade, the fruit of which has been fully apparent.

At this time, several Slave-traders, and those engaged in fitting out slavers, left this City for Havana, since which time those not arrested have made that their place of residence.

In July Mrs. WATSON left for Lisbon, arriving at which place, she was requested to make some other place her headquarters, and went to Cadiz, where her passport was taken away. She has since died, and her vessels, fitted for the trade in negroes, are under embargoes. Among the vessels seized are the bark Magaret Scott, seized Sept. 11, 1861, and Capt. SEBROW and two mates, and the owner, SKINNER, arrested. The bark has since been condemned and sold, and SKINNER convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment and a fine of $1,000.

Sept. 20.—The bark Augusta was condemned, and afterward sold.

Nov. 16.—The bark Augusta was again seized. Capt. PELSTON and three mates of the bark Arduenas were tried at Hayti, and sentenced each to five years' imprisonment.

The arrest of J. A. MACHADO may be considered the "last of the Mohicans," and with it the nest of Slavers in this city is completely broken up, and the trade has received a quietus which it will not recover from for the present.

The arrangements are such with our Consuls abroad that no American vessel can fit out at a foreign port, and certainly they have none encouragement here.

The Seward-Lyons Treaty has so defined the [illegible] that it no longer [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] that the door of that lady's residence will be besieged by clamorous crowds in short [illegible] and jackets, remonstrating both in sorrow and in anger, against such an unjust occasion on her part. They will, perhaps, send in petitions, as constituents do to Congressmen, and if these petitions are disregarded, peremptory demands may follow. We fear that "Aunt Fanny" will be compelled to return to her allegiance by sheer force of arms—her outreaching childish arms—whose mute appeals she cannot resist, though she do the threatenings of clenched little fists. Certainly in the success she has achieved in The Wife's Stratagem—published by the ASTOR PRESS—there is temptation enough to make an ordinary woman disclaim children and night-caps forever, and busy herself with the heads of adult audiences. The book is not so strategical as the title would indicate. All the plot can be told in a few words, all the stratagem laid bare in a sentence. A pretty little wife—whose husband, in consequence of the wicked secession of the South, and the non-payment by the chivalry of debts due to Northern mudsills, stood on the verge of bankruptcy, in morals as well as in means, and began to manifest an alarming fondness for broiled bones, devilled crabs, whisky punches and other strong inventions of the enemy—hit upon the expedient of starting a literary society, which should meet regularly to read and discuss papers and stories written by the members. The plan worked to a charm, and we behold the young husband surrendering his latch-key and resolutely turning his back on the devil and all his crabs. The stories written and read at these meetings form the staple of the book. Throughout it is pleasant and piquant. Written in the same sprightly vein which made the Night-Cap stories so charming to both old and young, and with uncommon grace of diction, we can heartily recommend Aunt FANNY's book to all who desire to spend a few of the spare hours of the approaching long Winter evenings pleasantly and profitably.

—America has produced a great many wonderful things in its way, but it never yet has produced a perfect TUPPER. But we have a very near approach to one in the author of Intuitions and Summaries of Thought—published by WILLIAM VERRIL, of Boston. He says undisputed things in the same solemn way that the author of "Proverbial Philosophy" does. Two volumes are filled with paragraphs on nearly every conceivable subject. It would be rather difficult for any man to say so much without saying something good—but our author nearly surmounts that difficulty. True, he occasionally makes a slight mistake, and admits an original idea, well expressed, and worthy of being garnered up in memory—but the proportion these exceptional few bear to those which are utterly common-place and chaffy is about as a kernel of wheat to a bushel of bran. The author says his volumes are the result of an early habit of "jotting down from time to time, as occasions served and circumstance permitted, impressions deemed worthy to be noted." This habit is certainly a commendable one in any individual, but, like many other good habits, it may be carried so far as to become a bad one. BACON advises a man to carry a pencil in his pocket, and write down the thoughts of the moment, but he says nothing about printing them. If it suddenly occurs to a man that the sun is a luminous object, and a great convenience to the greater part of creation, though rather a bore to owls, there is no valid reason why he should not "put it down," or make a "memmition note" of it, as Mr. Mantilini might say. But before summarizing the thought, or intuition, for the benefit of the public, it would be well to consider whether the same idea would not naturally occur to all reflective minds, and whether some philosopher of a more ancient school had not before expressed it in terser and more forcible words than any he could employ. Latitude in an author is not an unpardonable offence; longitude, too, may be forgiven, but platitude—never.

—Army correspondents are emphatically the historians of the war, if not a part of the war itself. Though our armies move never so swiftly and silently, the "special" glides along with them—clouds of "our owns" followed McCLELLAN to the Peninsula, and however skillfully he avoided meeting the enemy, he could not dodge them; BUSEL could not escape them at the West. They are, in fact, becoming quite as necessary to the physical and moral well being of the soldiers as surgeons, chaplains and ambulances. A General scarcely considers himself well appointed unless he has a score or so of correspondents with his corps, to note down his heroism in the field and his gentlemanly demeanor and soldierly bearing in the tent, to criticise his movements and make clear to him his own plans and combinations, vague and shadowy before. In the day of battle, with note-book and pencil in hand, he rides fearlessly in the van—bullets may rain around him, but he bears a charmed life. Shot and shell are to him trifles somewhat lighter than air. In rapid advances and brisk retreats he is equally eminent. Should a bullet bring its billet to any particular General, relieving him of command, "our own" would order While Surrey to be saddled, without the least hesitation or misgiving, and himself lead the soldiers to the fray. There is no peril that can appal the army correspondent, no enterprise he is not ready and willing to undertake. And now one of them has written a book—The Siege of Richmond—published by Geo. W. CHILDS, of Philadelphia. The story of the Peninsula campaign is well, and in the main, truthfully told, though we detect occasional inaccuracies. It is written by one JOHN CODE, an "army special" of the Philadelphia Press, and is ushered with an introduction by BAYARD TAYLOR.

—Mr. SPURGEON has his admirers in this country as well as in England. These will be glad to learn that a seventh series of his sermons is published by SHELDON & Co. If the popularity and fertility of the great Latter Day preacher continues to the end, the series will very likely be multiplied to seventy times seven. That all the "Spurgeon Sermons" will be republished in this country we have not a doubt, since several of them have been translated for the aborigines of New-Zealand—a people who are destitute as theologians, however far from nice they are in serving up friends as side dishes at tables—and the sermon that would edify the cannibal mind should be well calculated to reach and interest the impenitent American heart.

—The name of JACOB ABBOTT, in the youthful mind, must be nearly and inseparably associated with sugar-coated pills and jellies that contain medicines in sweet disguise. Children think he is telling them pleasant stories, when all the while they are reading history. Volume fourth [illegible] MR. ABBOTT's history of NAPOLEON, and much more truthful.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN HOUSTON-STREET.

Total Destruction of a Large Iron Works Establishment, a Church and a Number of Other Buildings.

Estimated Loss a Quarter of a Million of Dollars.

An Insurance Watchman Buried Under the Ruins—Several Persons Seriously Injured.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock yesterday morning, a fire broke out in a large five-story manufactory, situated on the southeast corner of West Houston and Greene streets, which, spreading with terrible rapidity, despite the most vigorous exertions of the firemen, soon enveloped the entire building in flames, and thence communicated to the adjoining buildings. When the roof and walls of the structure, where the fire originated, fell, the roof and steeple of the Second Associate Presbyterian Church, a large stone edifice on the southwest corner of Greene and West Houston streets, caught fire, and although, by this time there were at least a dozen streams of water playing upon it from steam and hand engines, the flames very soon spread rapidly all over the church, defying the earnest and well-timed efforts of the hardy firemen to stay the terrible conflagration. The old stone church, which for years—how many we know not—has stood there in the center of vice and crime, a monument of virtue, and always with open doors, inviting the sinner and the stranger to come within, was in length completed to correspond to the fury of the element. It is now nothing but a heap of undistinguishable ruins. The parsonage also, No. 147 Greene-street, a three-story brick building, adjoining the church, occupied by the Pastor, Rev. JAMES HARPER, was consumed, nothing being left except the bare walls.

The following is a list of the losers and insurance, so far as we have been able to ascertain them. Yesterday being Sunday, it was of course impossible to obtain information with that degree of accuracy, or to that extent, which might have been done upon any other day of the week.

ON WEST HOUSTON-STREET.

No. 25, first floor and a room on the second floor, were occupied by SANFORD, HARBOUR & Co., printers. Their loss is estimated at about $5,000, believed to be fully insured. No. 27, first floor, was occupied by the Wright Silver-Plating Company. Their loss is very heavy, but it is believed they are fully insured in City Companies. No. 29, first floor, was occupied by E. W. SIMONS, as a knee-stick steam manufactory. His loss is over $4,000, upon stock and machinery. He is insured for $2,000 in the following Companies, viz.: The New-York Fire and Marine, the New-York Equitable, Security, Citizens', and one other City Company. The second floor was occupied by a number of tenants, as follows: Rooms Nos. 1 and 2 by JOSEPH THOMAS, manufacturer of machine needles. His loss is over $1,000; believed to be fully insured. Mr. A. CARR, manufacturer of brass cocks, occupied Room No. 4, on this floor; his loss is large, but is believed to be fully insured. In Room 5 the loss is heavy, but is supposed to be fully covered by two City Companies. Room No. 6, on the second floor, was occupied by the "Elastic Fibrous Cork Company." Their loss is perhaps $8,000—insured for $6,000 in the Kings County Insurance Company. Mr. R. PINSSENAT lost all his tools, which were in the latter room. He is insured for $100 in the Kings County Insurance Company. Messrs. SAYRES, HINCHMAN & Co. occupied Rooms Nos. 6 and 7, and have there lost considerable amount of stock and fixtures. Mr. J. D. SAYRE, brass finisher, was the occupant of Room No. 8. His loss is about $3,000; not insured. The third floor of the entire building—which included Nos. 23, 25, 27 and 29 West Houston-street, as well as Nos. 149 Greene-street—was occupied by the Messrs. ALTHAUSS SONS. The furniture occupied by the Magic Ruffle Company. Their loss is about $16,000; supposed to be partly insured. Mr. A. MAYERS, sash-shirt manufacturer, occupied the fifth floor. His loss is over $6,000, and it is reported that he is wholly insured.

The building, of which we have thus given the occupants and their losses so far as possible, was on the southeast corner of West Houston and Greene streets. It extended 100 feet on Houston, and about 125 feet on Greene-street. It was five stories in height, and was owned by the Althauss Estate. It was totally destroyed; nothing remained standing last night except a small portion of the wall on Houston-street and one of the chimneys. The fire is believed to have originated in this building on the Greene-street side. The estimated loss upon the building alone is $60,000. It was insured for $75,000 in the following Companies, viz.: Empire City, Home, Mercantile, City, Liverpool and London, Firemen's, Relief, United States, Pelion, Brooklyn, Ratgers, Mechanics and Traders', Broadway, and Jersey City Insurance Companies.

The building, No. 21 West Houston (unoccupied) was damaged by the falling of the wall of the main building upon the roof, to the amount of $2,000. No. 21 is said to be fully insured.

ON GREENE-STREET.

No. 144 Greene-street, a four-story building, was occupied by T. C. BAKER, brass finisher, on the first floor. His loss is about $4,000; insured for $2,500 in the Williamsburgh City Insurance Company. The three upper floors were occupied by Messrs. TAYLOR & PLACE, and known as the Rubber Mills. Their loss will amount to over $7,000; said to be fully insured. Mr. D. SHARE, marble finisher, occupied a room on the second floor; his loss is over $2,000; partially insured in City Companies. This building also belongs to the Althauss estate. It was totally destroyed. The estimated loss thereon is about $11,000. It was insured for $10,000 in the Eagle and Manhattan Insurance Companies.

No. 142 Greene-street was a four story dwelling house, unoccupied. It was damaged to the amount of $2,000, and is said to be insured.

No. 140, a three story dwelling house, occupied by J. M. PARSONS, CHAS. H. RANDS and E. MINER. The furniture of the occupants was very much damaged, so much so as to involve almost a total loss. It is reported that they were wholly uninsured. This building is also owned by the Althauss estate. It was damaged to the amount of $600; insured for $7,500 in the Broadway and Citizens' Insurance Companies.

The Second Associate Presbyterian Church, situated on the southwest corner of Greene and West Houston streets, was entirely destroyed; nothing remains but the bare walls. The loss upon this is estimated at over $60,000. It was insured for $40,000 in the Innsurance and Greenwich, and one or two other Insurance Companies.

No. 147 Greene-street, a three-story brick dwelling house, owned by the Presbyterian Church above named, and occupied by a gentleman, and occupied by the pastor, Rev. Mr. HARPER, was totally destroyed. The Rev. gentleman, it is said, had an insurance on his furniture for $1,000 in the Jersey City Insurance Company.

No. 149, a dwelling house, owned and occupied by ANNA MILLS, was damaged to the amount of $1,500; she is insured for $4,000 in the Lorillard Insurance Company. The loss on her furniture will be about $700; insured for $2,000 in the Nine Insurance Company, of Hartford.

No. 151 is a boarding house and liquor saloon, kept by G. MERRITT; loss $400; not insured. This building is owned by Mr. J. BROUVERAL. It was damaged to the amount of about $400; insured for $6,000 in the Pacific and other Insurance Companies. The buildings Nos. 26, 28 and 34 West Houston-street, were several times on fire, but the firemen and Police, with commendable alacrity, extinguished the flames, thereby preventing the fire from spreading to other buildings.

This fire, when at its height, is said by old and experienced firemen to have been one of the most grand and imposing spectacles which has been witnessed in this City for many years. Flames were seen issuing from every window in various directions, and about 2 o'clock A. M. the roof of the church, the roof of Greene-street, and also the roofs of houses Nos. 27, 29, 31 and 33 Houston-street, and No. 73 Greene-street. But for the prompt [illegible]

FINE ARTS.

EXHIBITION OF THE ARTIST'S FUND SOCIETY.—The artist of this friendly and admirable association open their third annual Exhibition to-day, at the Gallery of the Fine Art Institute, No. 625 Broadway. There was a private view of the collection Saturday evening, when the artists were present to entertain, with frank hospitality, their many friends. The principal feature of [illegible] were many fine specimens by Church, Kensett, Hennessy, Eastman, Johnson, Hamilton, Gifford, Boughton, Gignoux, and the other leading representatives of the modern school of landscape and genre. We have rarely seen a finer show of cabinet pictures. The pictures thus liberally contributed, will of course be sold for the benefit of the fund. But the interest of the Exhibition is not limited to the pleasure of contemplation of these rare gems. The Society has proceeded in borrowing from wealthy collectors an assortment of the best works of art in the Metropolis, and the result is an exhibition which exceeds in general interest and intrinsic value any exhibition that has preceded it. Those who would know what American artists have accomplished, may have its equal. It is indeed an opportunity which no one should neglect, for it may not occur again. It exhibits to choice pictures by Stuart, Allston, Trumbull, Cole, Inman, and our first living American artists, there are several fine specimens of foreign works from the collection of WM. H. WEST, Esq.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

THE LATE STRIKE AT THE GAS WORKS.—[illegible] Assistant, &c.—The recent strike of the Irish laborers employed on the Manhattan Gas Works, foot of Fourteenth-street, East River, for higher wages, has resulted in their discharge and the employment of Germans by the Gas Company. This enraged the strikers, and many of them have determined not to remain quietly, and on Saturday evening a few of the discharged men collected at the Gas Works, evidently bent on mischief. Soon afterwards, as Captain CLINE and JAMES REAR were closing their work to go home, they were set upon and terribly beaten. CLINE was struck on the brow with a hammer and REAR had his skull fractured by a blow from a bar of iron in the hands of one of the rioters. HENRY MOHOY and THOMAS GRIFFIN were arrested by the Eighteenth-street Police, charged with being the persons who inflicted the violence. They were taken before Justice KELLY and committed to answer the charge of burglary and battery and rioting.

ROBBERY BY A DRUNK MAN.—JOHN MCGUIRE, a nurse in the United States Army, applied for lodgings at a miserable crib on the Points, on Saturday night, and slept in the same bed with THOMAS SULLIVAN, a blind man. During the night, SULLIVAN stealthily left his couch, and rifled the pockets of his bed-fellow, taking therefrom $40 in money, some papers, &c. He also stole the clothes of MCGUIRE, thus compelling the poor fellow, as a matter of necessity, to remain in bed. In the morning, MCGUIRE discovered his loss, and accused the sixth Ward officer, BENNETT, of the spot. After hearing the victim's story, he arrested SULLIVAN, who protested his innocence, but a thorough search of his person brought to light $40 of the money, which was found concealed in one of his shoes. The accused was taken before Justice BEERMAN, and locked up for trial. MCGUIRE, the complainant, was sent to the House of Detention as a witness.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A CLERGYMAN.—On Saturday evening Rev. R. HERMAN KING, while walking up Broadway with his wife, fell to the pavement, near the corner of Washington-place. He was removed to the drug store under the New-York Hotel, in a state of insensibility. A physician was called, but his name, or name of little child, no death caused shortly afterward. Coroner WILKES yesterday held an inquest on the body, at No. 181 East Tenth-street, and a post-mortem examination, made by Dr. GEORGE H. BOTTOM, showed that disease of the heart was the cause of death. Deceased was a Presbyterian clergyman. He was 40 years of age, and a native of Vermont. The reverend gentleman had been complaining for two years, and had attended exclusively for the benefit of his health.

THE RECENT SHOOTING OF A CITIZEN BY A PATROLMAN.—MARTIN WEBER, the young man who was shot by Patrolman JOHN RUMMER, of the Sixth Precinct, during an altercation between them at the porter house No. 2 Centre-street, is much better, is pronounced out of danger by the Hospital Surgeons, and his charge of felon. A motion to bail Rummer was made on Saturday by Judge BRADLEY, but the motion was postponed till to-day. It is probable the prisoner will be liberated on giving bonds in $2,000 to answer a charge of shooting with intent to kill. Capt. DEVERNE has preferred charges against Rummer before the Police Commissioners, and the trial will take place during the present week.

A SAD AFFAIR AT EAST NEW-YORK.—A SOLDIER ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.—About 9 o'clock, on Friday night, Sergeant BURNS M. SHAW, attached to Company [illegible], Thirty-third Regiment, of Maine, was quartered in the East New-York Barracks, met with his death under circumstances of a very painful character. The deceased, while sitting with Capt. HAYNES and First Lieut. CHAMBERS, all of the same company, in their quarters, discussed the situation of the Consuls to a pistol which Second Lieut. HOWES had purchased the same afternoon. The pistol was taken from the table where it had been placed by the Lieutenant, who was unfamiliarly therein on duty at the time, and thrown to the Captain, who commenced to examine it, and while so doing the pistol exploded, the ball entering the [illegible] SHAW's upper jaw, on the left side, crossing the brain, where it lodged. He was immediately conveyed to the regimental hospital, where he was attended by the surgeons. He lingered until 2 o'clock, Saturday morning, when he died. Coroner HOWE held an inquest, and the jury, after hearing all the evidence brought in the following verdict: "That Sergeant BURNS M. SHAW came by his death accidentally, shot by a pistol in the hands of Capt. MASON B. HAYNES; that the same was purely accidental, and the said MASON B. HAYNES is hereby exonerated from all blame." The body has been taken in charge by the company, to be forwarded to his friends in Maine. Deceased was 22 years of age.

TRYING TO A SURGEON.—The friends of Dr. J. M. [illegible], Surgeon, of the Brooklyn Fourth [illegible] Regiment, are about perfecting arrangements to present him with a testimonial of their esteem, and in acknowledgment of his faithful services on the battle field. The testimonial consists of a Masonic Coat of Arms, upon which is inserted the name of Bull Run, Manassas, South Mountain and Antietam, the chief battles at which he was present. The crest is bordered with appropriate mottoes.

[illegible] CORONER COURTS OF SURGEONS.—The following persons [illegible]

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

[illegible]

PETITION.

By Alderman Boole:

[illegible]

Which was carried.

Alderman Boole moved that the Board adjourn to meet on Monday, the fifteenth instant, at twelve o'clock, M.

Which was carried.

PAPERS HEREINBEFORE LAID OVER.

Report of Committee on Roads, in favor of concurring with the Board of Aldermen in amending resolution of Board of Aldermen, relative to opening certain streets, from Forty-second to Ninety-sixth streets, the opening of which the Committee recommend be not concurred in.

The Committee on Roads of the Board of Aldermen unanimously reported resolutions that the Counsel to the Corporation take the necessary legal proceedings for opening the street authorized by the act, chapter four hundred and sixty-six of the eighteen hundred and sixty-two, as amended by the act of the present year, chapter two hundred and seventy-six; also, that the Counsel to the Corporation take the necessary legal proceedings for opening the following streets, viz: Eighth-avenue to the Hudson River; Ninety-third-street, from the Fourth-avenue to the East River; Ninety-fourth-street, from the Third-avenue to the East River, and from the Eighth-avenue to the Hudson River; also Ninety-fifth-street, from the Third-avenue to the East River, and from the Eighth-avenue to the Hudson River.

In Board of Councilmen, August fourth, on recommendation of the Committee on Street Openings, the same was concurred in, so far as relates to the matter of opening Ninety-fourth-street, from Third-avenue to the East River, streets; also, in that part of Ninety-second and Ninety-third-streets respectively, between Eighth-avenue and Bloomingdale-road; also, in the matter of opening Ninety-fourth-street, from the Third-avenue to the East River, and from the Eighth-avenue to the Hudson River; also, in the matter of Ninety-fifth-street, where not already opened, from the Fifth-avenue to the East River, and from the Eighth-avenue to the Hudson River.

The Committee on Roads, of the Board of Aldermen, now recommend a non-concurrence with the Board of Councilmen, except as far as regards the opening of Madison-avenue, and as to that the Committee recommend that the avenue be not opened.

The action of the Board of Councilmen was concurred in, so far as relates to the opening of Madison-avenue.

Affirmative—Aldermen Smith, Walsh, The President, Hall, Tormahl, Fryer, Boole, Allen, Farley—9.

Report of Committee on Fire Department, in favor of adopting resolution that the Comptroller be directed to draw his warrant in favor of Hector L. Horton, foreman of Hose Company number Thirty-two, for fifty cents, to be in full for rent and repairs to premises occupied by Hose Company number Thirty-two, as engine-house, for the year ending May 1, 1862.

Which was adopted by the following vote, viz:

Affirmative—Aldermen Walsh, The President, Hall, Blood, Mitchell, Tormahl, Fryer, Boole, Allen, Farley—10.

On motion the Board then adjourned, and the President announced that the Board stood adjourned until next Monday, the seventeenth instant, at twelve o'clock M.

D. T. VALENTINE, Clerk.

MONDAY, Nov. 17—A. M.

The sealed offers for $18,420,550 United States Treasury Bonds, 7.30 ₩ cents., two years to run from 1st October last, will be opened and canvassed by the Secretary of the Treasury at noon to-day, at the Department in Washington. The amount of bids which went from this City by mail on Saturday evening, and to which additions will probably be made by New-York parties in person, to-day, will no doubt, we have reason to suppose, exceed the sum total asked for by the Secretary. In consequence of the facility afforded by the telegraph of changing the amount and rate of bidding to the last hour, the Assistant Treasurer at New-York has deemed it improper to communicate to the Press, in advance, the sum of preliminary security or earnest-money, left with him to the about 4 o'clock shall on Saturday, and with the particular purpose of this decision we have no reason to complain. As stated in our Sunday edition, opinions continued to differ widely in Wall-Street to the close of the day, as to the whole range and probable successful average of the offers made from this City; nor was it known what minimum rate the Secretary may be inclined to accept, provided the whole amount is not bid for within a close approximation of the current market price of the same stock. The range of bidding talked of, was from 102½ to 104 ₩ cent, the last figure being the price at which about $150,000 of the Bonds were bought up at the Stock Exchange, and the counters of the Money Brokers, on Saturday. The weight of opinion appeared to be that to offer below 103 ₩ cent will prove unsuccessful in the general competition, or acceptable to the Secretary. But as one of these large combinations often does what no one, at least, on a printed invitation extensively circulated here and throughout the States of New-York and New-England—on the assurance that the best rate for the takers would, if possible, be made, it would scarcely be safe to assume that a lower figure may not be successful, if the Secretary should deem it best to close on the more balance of this very desirable loan.

The circumstances preceding this award of Public Stock, have not been as favorable as they should have been, partly in consequence of the acceptance by the Secretary of $10,000,000 on deposit at 6 per cent., 15 days notice, in anticipation of the proceeds of the Loan. The step, by whomsoever suggested or advised, was an unfortunate one, in this, that it gave a most plausible pretext, and in the estimation of some parties imposed the necessity of a sharp, as well as sudden and wholly unlooked for turn in the money market on the very eve of the award of the Loan; and this while nearly the entire sum borrowed still remains in the Sub-Treasury. We dare say that Mr. CHASE anticipated no such effect, and we are quite sure that he, as well as many other financial authorities, was deceived and surprised as to the available surplus Currency of the United States idle in the New-York Banks at the time he accepted this deposit, in place of substituting his own United States Notes, which he could have done, though in larger denominations than he desired to use, while the smaller Notes are being printed and sealed. We learn that he has since directed the preparation of a large amount of $1,000 Notes, and these will be ready in a few days, if they are not already so, for any emergency, here or elsewhere. Should he thus encroach upon the reserve of small Notes, which he designed to hold until they can be prepared for the special use of the Army, he will have only to exchange or withdraw a portion of the $1,000 denomination when the others are made ready. The entire authority of $300,000,000 is not exhausted, according to our last advices, by at least $80,000,000, to which $20,000,000 will be added as the remaining outstanding Custom-house Notes are taken in for Duties and canceled. Of this $90,000,000, the sum of $50,000,000 will be held, probably in $1,000 and $500 Notes, to be used in returning any portion of the temporary Deposits made with the Treasury in 4@5 ₩ cent. interest.

Another inference used against the price of the present Loan, last week, was a rumor, wholly unauthorized, as far as we have been able to know, by anything that the Secretary has said or done or intimated as a pledge on the subject, that his financial policy and plans are to be suddenly reversed, or radically changed, in the direction of the curtailment of United States Notes, and the public sale in the open market of his Stocks for the best price they will bring in State Bank Currency, equally irredeemable in Gold, with his own Circulation, and in no sense likely to return to a Specie basis until after the close of the War. The suggestion itself is both untimely and impracticable, and if urged upon the Government by Bank officials, it is simply impertinent. The fact that the experience of the last week has demonstrated that nineteen-twentieths of the National Circulation is so widely diffused through the loyal States of the North and West, and is so closely held and appreciated by the People, that ten millions of United States Notes could not be scraped together in the City of New-York without temporarily convulsing the Money Market, sufficiently refutes the theory of a redundant National Currency, and renders the idea of a change of policy by its sudden curtailment or withdrawal, an absurdity. On the other hand, the fact thus made patent will not be lost upon the Secretary, or upon Congress, to whom he will be much more likely to submit the question of an increased issue of United States Notes to answer the call of business, than to recommend its withdrawal, at a season when there is no available surplus of State Bank Currency, if it were even desirable to substitute it in the disbursements of the Government.

Equally unfounded, we believe, is the intimation that the Secretary will attempt to make war upon the banking system of the loyal States, by taxing their Circulation, unless registered at the Treasury of the United States, on the pledge of Government Stock. That he may again submit his plan of Banking, as an independent system, with a pledge of certain advantages to all local circulation registered under it, is possible. But to the insidious and mischief-making advice, such as appears of late in the editorial columns of the New-York Herald, that he should tax out of existence, or else subject to the support and control of the National Government, the State Bank system, thereby raising a direct and irritating issue with the rights and legislation of the loyal States, pending a Bloody War in which they are daily making vast sacrifices of men and money, he will not, we apprehend, listen for a moment.

A second organization for active business in the New-York Stock Exchange market, independent of the present Stock Exchange Board of Brokers, was resolved upon on Saturday evening, by a meeting of gentlemen friendly disposed to the movement, at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. The meeting embraced a representation from the leading Exchange and Money Brokers in Wall-street, besides the outside operators on the Stock Exchange, the most substantial of whom, in point of private wealth and respectability, took a leading part in the preliminary proceedings. Several members of firms already represented in the old Board were also present, one of whom, Mr. LEONARD W. JERMAIN, presided. Mr. HENRY CLEWES, of LIVERMORE, CLEWES & Co., acted as Secretary. The report of a Committee, previously named at an informal conference on the subject, was made by the Chairman. The first step in the proposed organization was recommended to be the careful and discriminating selection of a Board of Managers, to consist, primarily, of nine members, to be named at the present meeting, who are to select, with a judicious view to their responsibility and usefulness, thirteen colleagues, out of all the names presented in the next four or five days, for membership in the new organization. And these twenty-five are to constitute the NEW BOARD, until they pass upon all the other names or applications presented for membership. The meeting, after adopting this plan of preliminary organization, adjourned to Friday evening next, 21st instant; first, however, upon a careful canvass of names, approving the following as the Board or Committee of nine: Mr. EDWARD A. CONRY, Mr. WILLIAM G. HEAD, of Read, Drexel & Co.; Mr. HENRY CLEWES, of Livermore, Clewes & Co.; Mr. A. G. JEROME, of A. G. Jerome & Son; Mr. EDWARD B. WESLEY, Mr. GEORGE A. OSGOOD, Mr. A. C. BURR, Mr. T. C. DURANT, and Mr. HENRY A. STONE, of H. A. Stone & Son. The understanding appears to be that the constitution and rules will be directed to the most liberal transaction of business, something after the plan of the New-York Corn and Produce Exchange, practically open to the public, but having due care to the good conduct and promptness of the members of the organization. Of course the success of this independent undertaking, the want of which has been more oppressively felt since the heavy and important increase in the Public Stocks and Treasury Funds of the United States, and the recent large extension of the area of speculation and investment in other Stocks and Bonds, will vary materially, if not wholly, depend upon the liberality, coupled with a due regard to order and responsibility, of the organization at the outset. For the present, we have only to add that the dignified and deliberate proceedings on Saturday evening gave promise of a substantial public good.

The New-York Stock Exchange, old Board, on Saturday forenoon, after due discussion, restored the original order of last Winter, permitting cash and time dealings in American Gold Coin and United States Notes, of the first issue, employed at the Custom-house in the payment of Duties, as a substitute for Coin. The argument was that the thirty days' experiment of exclusion had failed of the good which was intended to be accomplished in repressing speculation in Gold, by reason of the absence of cooperation by Banks and other Money lenders upon Gold. It was also intimated that commissions had not only been diverted from the Board to outside Brokers in Bullion, the number of whom have recently increased, but that Gold is regularly called up and speculated in every afternoon in the outside room on William-street, where many of the members of the Board are in the practice of attending and operating. The principle of dealing in Gold at the regular Stock Exchange Board, whose official quotations and lists of sales are published to the whole country, twice a day, was still warmly condemned as detrimental to the Public Credit, and damaging to the stability of business in Foreign Exchange and the Import and Export trade, by a number of members opposed to the reversal of the recent decision, but on the final question, they were outvoted, we understand, two or three to one, and Gold and Custom-house Notes were again called at the afternoon Board, and large sales of the former reported on the printed list.

The Foreign Trade at and from New-York the past week was active in the line of Exports, both of ordinary Domestic Produce and in Bullion, of which about a million and a quarter went to Europe on Saturday. The Import entries partially improved over the previous week, though still moderate. The Customs improved to $996,000. The price of United States Customhouse Notes at the close of the week is 125¼ ₩ cent., Gold 132 ₩ cent., against 131¾ at the close of the previous week; Exchange on London 155 ₩ cent. The market for Money is 6@7 ₩ cent., as against 4@6 ₩ cent. the week before. The largest demand was on Thursday and Friday. At the close the supply was easy at 6 ₩ cent., as the rule to the Brokers, with exceptions as high as 7 and as low as 5 ₩ cent. The Merchant demand for Money continues moderate, and out of town buyers of prime paper are making rather easier terms than the current rates for Money at Bank. The balance in the Sub-Treasury is $16,526,000, as against $17,474,000 at the close of the previous week. The sudden turn in the market has also brought in considerable coin from New-England for the purchase of Stocks. The adverse effect of the change upon the speculative Railway Shares and Bonds, however, was only partially recovered from at the close of the week. The last dealings of Saturday left off steady, with indications of a better demand after the pending negotiation at Washington is determined. The following was the general

Increase	$191,041 16

This result is what we intimated it would probably be in our last weekly review, although a much larger gain was rumored on the Street and copied by some of our cotemporaries.

The Import entries of the past week, including the Dry Goods return in our last paper, amount to $3,364,464, against $1,812,734 same week last season. The Export clearances of Domestic Produce amount to $6,315,816, against $3,287,119 same week in 1861. The Export of Specie is $1,894,609.

The tables of the Foreign Trade at New-York, published a few weeks since, make the Import entries, exclusive of Specie, for nine months of the calendar year:

Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1860	$218,611,000
Add seven weeks since 1st October	26,440,000
Total to date, 1860	$257,956,000
Against same time, 1861	112,039,152
Increase since Jan. 1	$95,027,543

The same tables make the Export Clearances of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, including Foreign articles exported, from Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1860:

Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1860	$107,157,000
Add seven weeks since 1st October	26,108,479
Total to date, 1860	$133,265,479
Against same time, 1861	117,743,796
Increase since Jan. 1	$15,122,675

The Exports of Specie from

Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1860, were	$49,944,000
Add since 1st October	9,608,000
Total to date, 1860	$59,552,000
Against same time, 1861	9,223,400
Increase since Jan. 1	$50,328,600

The Stock Exchange Board, on Saturday, admitted Mr. BEVERLY ROBINSON, Jr., now with Messrs. SEYMOUR & WADSWORTH, to membership. Mr. GEORGE R. PRESBREY, recently admitted to membership, has taken an office at No. 29 William-street, for the purchase and sale of Stocks and Bonds.

We are requested to state that Messrs. LIVERMORE, CLEWES & Co. and Messrs. THOMPSON BROTHERS will receive orders for the 7.30 ₩ cents. to be awarded to-day, up to about 10 o'clock this morning, to be transmitted by telegraph to their representatives now at Washington, who will not file their last bids until a few moments before noon, the hour of opening.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the Galena and Chicago Company, inviting proposals for the sale to the Company's Sinking Fund of any part of $41,000, first or second mortgage bonds. The offers should be filed with Messrs. VERMILYE & Co., No. 44 Wall-street, by noon on the 21st inst.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

President Lincoln has issued a general order enjoining a more strict observance of the Sabbath in the army and navy.

The rebel cavalry on Saturday, about five hundred strong, with artillery, made an attack upon Gen. Stahel's supply train, as his division was crossing the Rappahannock, near Sulphur Springs. They were immediately driven off, with the loss of a number of prisoners. Our loss was only a few killed.

Gen. Burnside has issued an important general order dividing the army under his command into three grand divisions, named respectively the Right, Left, and Center Grand Divisions. The first, consisting of the Second and Ninth Corps, will be commanded by Gen. Sumner; the second, consisting of the First and Sixth Corps, will be commanded by Gen. Franklin, and the third, consisting of the Third and Fifth Corps, will be commanded by Gen. Hooker. In addition to these there will be a Corps of Reserve, consisting of the Eleventh Corps and such other forces as may hereafter be assigned to it, under command of Gen. Sigel. Other new and important arrangements are indicated in the order.

A dispatch to the Washington Star, dated Harrison's, Nov. 14, says: "My latest information from Warrenton satisfies me that the time since Gen. Burnside assumed the command has been quite profitably spent in perfecting the army's arrangements to meet the enemy when the grand clash of army arms takes place. Everything is now in readiness for the resumption of the forward move, which I believe will occur shortly, to-day. There were many supplies of various kinds wanted, which were delayed by the necessary change of the supplying base. They have been rapidly getting to the front for some days past, however. So I presume that in twenty-four hours, at furthest, you will learn that nearly the whole army is again upon the march for the enemy."

By the arrival at this port of the gunboat Connecticut, we receive our correspondence from New-Orleans to the 4th inst., furnishing interesting details of the expedition under command of Gen. Weitzel, the progress of which so far as Donaldsonville has already been chronicled. Our forces encountered the enemy in considerable strength at a place called Labadieville, and defeated them after a brisk fight, and a brilliant display of generalship on the part of Gen. Weitzel, whose official account of the affair we publish. Upward of two hundred of the enemy were killed, wounded and taken prisoners, and one piece of artillery was captured. The rebels were pursued in the direction of Berwick's Bay, where Gen. Mouton was supposed to be, and the probability is that the next arrival from New-Orleans will bring us still more important reports of Gen. Weitzel's operations. Gen. Butler had paid a visit of courtesy to the French war steamer Catinat, and the usual interchange of civilities took place on the occasion.

The officers of the gunboat Connecticut report that the entire coast of Texas is now in possession of the United States forces. The effect of this occupation is seen in the recent capture of a [illegible] vessel while attempting to run the blockade. Contraband trade through Texan ports is now effectually checked off.

Our advices from the Southwest indicate the likelihood that a battle will be fought soon between the National forces under Gen. Grant and the rebels lately at Holly Springs, notwithstanding the retreat of the latter from that post. A dispatch, dated the 14th, states that five regiments of rebel cavalry advanced on the previous evening from Lamphin's Mills to within two miles of Holly Springs, and that skirmishing had continued for some time, during which the rebels lost six men killed and seven commissioned officers captured. The Cincinnati Gazette, of Friday, says: "The fact that the rebels retreated from Holly Springs without a battle, may be regarded as evidence that their force is not as large as had been represented. Advices of the last week stated that Price had been reinforced by Marmaduke, from the South, but even then they were not willing to make a stand. Gen. Grant has a formidable and excellent army—large enough, undoubtedly, to drive the rebels. Whether he will get them 'against the wall' is a question. But he will certainly sweep through the country, carrying out the plan of this particular campaign, which is an important one, and will bring forth fruits with which the country will be delighted."

A letter, dated Mount Sterling, Ky., Nov. 10, says: "A thousand cavalry, sent here three weeks ago, could have captured a vast number of Kirby-Smith's disorganized army. Two regiments of the men deserted him at Salyersville, Mar. County, with what men he has left, was at Abingdon, Va., last Saturday a week ago. A considerable cavalry force must be kept up here to secure the whole country as far as the Virginia line, and keep it quiet. The rebels have destroyed almost everything from this place clear out to the eastern line of the State, belonging to Union men; and it is not yet safe for them to return to their homes. They must be protected by an ample force, or abandon their homes forever. We have here now, beside our cavalry force, (not yet mounted,) the Ninety-second Illinois, Col. Ayres, a good regiment of infantry—a good thing for the protection of this place—but we can't catch rebels with infantry. We must have cavalry; mounted men are the only thing to catch them with, and even then they generally outrun us."

The Trenton Gazette denies the story that there was an unusual number of visitors arrived in that city to pay their respects to Gen. McClellan. It says: "A number of gentlemen from different parts of the State, as well as from other States, have called upon him, but the absurd reports of crowds making their way in all directions are entirely unfounded. An inspection of the hotel registers will show that there has been no unusual number of strangers in Trenton during the week. In fact, the curiosity to see the General seems to be very limited, and a stranger visiting Trenton would not, from anything visible, imagine that there was any unusual interest manifested, or that any 'distinguished stranger' was in our midst." Gen. McClellan is expected to leave Trenton in a few days, to visit his friends in Connecticut.

The Washington Star of Saturday evening explains the arrest of two members of Gen. McClellan's Staff, at Trenton, by stating that they are not members of his personal staff, and consequently had no right to leave their places in the army to accompany Gen. McClellan to Trenton. There is a further explanation, however, from our own correspondent, which shows that the officers were guilty of using improper language.

Gen. Pleasonton, it is said, will be assigned to the command of the defences of the Capital. Gens. Wadsworth and Hemperleman will both take the field in a very short time.

Shortly after Capt. Dahlgren's men entered Fredericksburgh last Sunday it was discovered that there is an establishment there actively engaged in manufacturing cloth for the rebel army. Although two wagon-loads of the manufactured material were destroyed by our men, they had too much to occupy their time, or they would have stopped the operations of the concern.

GENERAL NEWS.

The steamship Etna passed Cape Race Saturday afternoon, with European advices four days later than those by the Europa. The political news is not particularly important. A slight collision is reported to have occurred between the Austrian and Italian troops on the frontiers, but quiet was soon restored. The London Times denies that any blame can be attached to England in reference to the pirate Alabama, but the Daily News takes an opposite view. Mr. Bright has written a letter applauding President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. Cotton was still on the advance in the Liverpool market. Breadstuffs and Provisions were dull. Consol for money 93¾.

The British steamship Talisman, Capt. Russell, arrived at this port last evening, from Kingston, Jamaica, 8th inst., and Port-au-Prince the 9th, with merchandise and passengers consigned to Messrs. Walden & Boddy.

Between 11 and 1 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in a large five-story brick building situated on the southeast corner of West Houston and Greene streets, which resulted not only in the complete destruction of that building, but of some ten or twelve others, including the Second Associate Presbyterian Church, located on the opposite corner. The estimated damage is about $250,000. An insurance watchman was buried under the burning ruins, and several other persons were seriously injured. A full account will be found in another column.

The Postmaster-General has given orders for the redemption of the postage-stamps that have been used for currency. Arrangements for carrying out this order will be perfected in a few days, on the return of Mr. Wakeman, who has been urging this matter upon the Department during his present visit to Washington.

A large meeting of prominent citizens was held at the Astor House, Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of arranging the details for a public reception of Maj.-Gen. Banks and his esteemed lady. Judge Chas. A. Peabody presided, and Cephas Brainard acted as Secretary. Addresses were made by Col. Montgomery, F. M. Weymore, John Pitch and others, highly complimentary to Gen. Banks, and a Committee of thirty-four was agreed upon to arrange the details of the reception. This Committee appointed a Sub-Committee to wait upon the General, and ascertain his pleasure as to the time and place of reception.

The Board of Aldermen met at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The name of Elliott C. Cowdin, for Street Commissioner, was rejected by 8 to 4. Resolutions were adopted to invite Gen. McClellan to the City and tender him its hospitalities; to inquire of the Corporation Counsel if there is any redress to be obtained of the Seventh Avenue Railroad Company, for the damage they are doing to the City pavement, and upon whom falls the duty of removing the rubbish they are leaving along their tracks; and to accept a gift of ground in Calvary Cemetery for the burial of Catholic soldiers who may die in the hospitals here. The Board concurred in ordering the opening of some up town streets, and adjourned till noon on Monday.

The Supervisors, as County Canvassers, held their fifth meeting at noon Saturday, canvassed the returns from the Tenth, Twelfth and Twenty-second Wards, and adjourned till noon on Monday. So far the returns have proved to be unusually free of mistakes and informalities, and the work is so smooth that the Board are having an easy job of it. The figures vary only trifingly, if any, from those heretofore published, and are not likely to change a single result.

The Assembly see-saw is again balanced. John B. Dutcher, Republican, is not elected in Dutchess County, but Luther T. Dutcher, his Democratic opponent, is successful, so that the Assembly is tied.

The States which have to elect their Representatives to the next Congress, and the dates at which they usually hold their elections, are as follows: New-Hampshire, on the second Tuesday in March, 1863; Rhode Island, first Wednesday in April, 1863; Connecticut, first Monday in April, 1863; Maryland, first Wednesday in November, 1863; Kentucky, first Monday in August, 1863; California, first Thursday in September, 1863; Virginia, fourth Thursday in May, 1863; North Carolina, (time not yet specified); Tennessee, (time not yet specified.)

The St. Paul Press estimates the Republican and Union majority in Minnesota on Congress, at between 2,000 and 2,500. The majority for Windom in the First District cannot be less than 800, and will more probably reach 1,000. There are several of the Republican counties in this district to hear from; but, from the way the others have voted, the majority is pretty certain to be 1,000. In the Second District there is every reason to believe that the majority for Gov. Donnelly will reach 1,500. The returns from all parts of the district, as they come in, only serve to swell the Governor's majority.

A terrible tragedy was perpetrated at Fort Clinton, N. Y., on Oct. 31. Henry Ricuarte, a hired man engaged by Mr. T. J. Kiel, took advantage of the absence of the eldest of his employer's three daughters from home, to entice the two younger girls, aged respectively fifteen and eleven years, into the barn where he was at work, and after violating their persons, strangled them to death by tying leather cords around their necks. They were found with faces swollen and discolored, and eyes starting from their sockets. On the return of the elder daughter, the villain refused to give any information regarding the girls, but seizing the first favorable opportunity, overpowered her, tied her hands and feet, and when consciousness, which she had lost in the struggle, was restored, told her that he did not desire to do her any injury, but that he only wished to prevent her from giving the alarm until he had made way with himself. As he was leaving the house for this purpose he met one of the neighbors, who had come in on some errand, told her that the girls for whom she asked were up stairs, and then going to the barn, succeeded in hanging himself before the alarm could be given. Very naturally the horrible affair created the most intense excitement in the town where it was perpetrated.

The steamer Rhode Island, running for some time past as a supply and dispatch vessel to Key West and New-Orleans, is to have a part of her upper works and hurricane-deck and the after-cabin on the gun-deck removed, and a heavier armament put on board, including a 100-pound rifled Parrott-gun. It will take two or three weeks to complete the work, which is now in progress at Boston. She will make an excellent cruiser, as she is a swift vessel. The British Confederate steamer Circassian, captured from the English and Confederates by the Somerset, is to run to the Gulf in place of the Rhode Island. She is fitting out at this port, and will be commanded by Capt. W. S. Rand, late of the Rhode Island.

Commissioner Fournade has decided that chiropodists are liable to a license tax under section 12 of the Excise law.

A letter from the United States ship Lancaster, Bay of Panama, Nov. 2, says: "We have received from New-York, by way of Aspinwall, six more large guns to add to the strength of our battery. We have now a battery of twenty-four broadside 8-inch Dahlgrens, two 30-pounds Parrotts rifled, and two 11-inch pivot-guns on the spar-deck. We also received by the Steamer Ocean Queen, from New-York, two hundred men, to be distributed through the different ships of the squadron. There are at present in this bay the United States ships St. Marys, Saranac, and flag-ship Lancaster. The officers and men are all well. The Saranac leaves here to-day. She is to cruise on the northwest coast of Mexico. The steamer Narragansett is at Acapulco, and the sloop-of-war Cyane is expected here soon."

Gen. Pope, as before announced, recently sent from St. Paul, Minn., by telegraph, the names of 324 Sioux Indians, whom a Military Commission had sentenced to death. The dispatch cost the snug little sum of $400. That amount ought to be deducted from Gen. Pope's salary. Of these 324 Indians, 304 have been sentenced to be hung, and 20 to be imprisoned. The few remaining friendly Indians with all the squaws and papooses are to come down to Fort Snelling immediately, in charge of Maj. Galbraith, Sioux Agent, with a sufficient force as a guard, under command of Lieut.-Col. Marshall, of the Seventh.

The official vote of Niagara County shows that Wadsworth's majority over Seymour was exactly two.

The necessity of filling up the old regiments in the field has elicited a new order from Adj.-Gen. Thomas, through the recommendation of Gov. Curtin, of Pennsylvania, by which the drafted State Militia, have the privilege of volunteering in the old regiments, either in companies or squads, under their own selected officers. This order also requires all substitutes hereafter employed to enter the old regiments on being accepted and mustered into service.

In the Court of Sessions, Saturday, Alfred Thompson, convicted of manslaughter in the fourth degree, was sentenced to one year in the City Prison. Wm. Brooks, convicted of an attempt at grand larceny, was sentenced to the State Prison for two years. Sentences were also passed upon four or five other persons, convicted of minor offences. The Grand Jury announced that they had finished up all the business before them, and were discharged for the term.

Henrietta Mollis has recovered, in the Court of Common Pleas, $4,000 against the firm of Loan & Taylor, for an alleged false arrest and search on suspicion of being a shoplifter.

There was a further recovery in Stocks on Saturday, the market closing steady. Gold left off 192 ⅞ cent.; Exchange, 146 ⅞ cent. Large preliminary deposits were made with the Sub-Treasury, on account of the Loan of $12,250,550, to be awarded to-day in Washington.

Breadstuffs were generally lower, on Saturday, and less active. The movements in Provisions were less extensive. Lard was cheaper. Cotton was in brisk demand, and decidedly higher. A fair business was transacted in Hay, Hops, Hides, Leathers, Coffee, Teas, Sugars, Fish, Fruit, Iron, Salt, and Tobacco at, in the main, very firm rates. Hemp, Rice, Molasses, and Naval Stores were quiet. Tallow and Whisky were less sought after. The Freight Market exhibited more activity and firmness, with 952 vessels of all classes in port.

Vast Cotton Fields in Our Hands—A Suggestion Concerning the Cotton.

In the case of the rapid march of Gen. Grant's army southward into the State of Mississippi, there is one thing observable. We have no reports of cotton burning in the pathway of his advance. It is not to be supposed that the country traversed and occupied has no cotton in it. On the contrary, we know that there is not a more fertile and favored cotton district in all the South than the northern part of Mississippi. Holly Springs and Hernando, flourishing towns now held by the United States forces, are famous depôts for Mississippi "Uplands." The region of country surrounding them is high and healthful; it is among the most populous of the interior districts of the South, being filled with enterprising, intelligent and wealthy planters, who have built railroads, traded to Memphis, and become largely liberalized by commercial influences.

Some of the guerrilla bands that were driven out of Memphis when that place was reduced by our gunboats, commenced destroying cotton as they fell back into Northern Mississippi. But the planters quickly organized, resisted and suppressed the outrages, and it is believed that the cotton in all this productive district has been saved. If it has been, scarcely less than a hundred and fifty thousand bales will be released from blockade by merely retaining the lines of the present advance of Gen. Grant's army. This, of itself, would be no inconsiderable relief of the cotton scarcity in the United States. But the national armies are not expected to pause at the points reached in Mississippi. They are pushing on rapidly toward Jackson, near the geographic centre and the Capital of the State, and will doubtless be able to occupy that place and then Vicksburgh. These points being gained and held, and the Yazoo Valley, the richest cotton region in America, in our possession, it would not be an extravagant calculation to estimate the cotton liberated and allowed to come to market at 300,000 bales. Such a realization would affect not only the cotton market of the United States, but that of Europe, and would go far to lift that dark curtain that has hung like a pall over the manufacturing districts of England and France ever since the war began.

We need not doubt the willingness of the holders of cotton to sell it, if the opportunity shall be offered. The fine rhetoric of rebel newspapers, extolling the patriotic self-sacrifice of planters who stood ready to plunge the burning brand into their fleecy possessions, as soon as the National armies came in sight, was all hyperbole. It was intended to beget the spirit it assumed to exist. But it did not. It is the uniform testimony of National officers who led the advances last Spring up the Mississippi River from New-Orleans, and down the River from Memphis toward Helena and Napoleon, when frequent bonfires of cotton stored on the bank were witnessed, that in every case the cotton was fired by rebel soldiers or guerrillas, the owners invariably protesting against, and, when they durst, resisting the destruction. In hardly an instance during the war has a planter been known to deliberately burn his own cotton.

Now that the cotton in Northern Mississippi is safe from the danger of the guerrilla bands as well as from the impressment of the rebel government, it is not likely the owners will make much delay in the sale of it. Rebel nature is not different from human nature, the world over. It loves self better than it loves that impersonal thing, the public, or the country. And however heroic the Mississippian may be on the plains or in the legislative hall, or in the field of battle—being ready to die figuratively and literally for the "Confederacy" the Mississippi planter who stays at home, ploughs, plants and gathers his cotton crop, would much rather sell it in the Memphis market and pocket the price, than see it made a bonfire of or cast it into the vortex of a Confederate National loan.

The disposition to be made of the Cotton brought within the lines of the United States armies, is a matter of sufficient importance to have obtained far more attention from the Government than it has received. The advance of our armies into Tennessee, North Alabama and Arkansas, has released hundreds of thousands of bales of cotton from blockade, worth many millions of dollars. The rich prize has drawn a legion of speculators along in the wake of the armies, who, under the protection of the National flag, have pushed their semi-illicit trade and realized, in the aggregate, millions of dollars of profit from it. This trade has been carried on within the knowledge and with the connivance, it is alleged, of leading officers of the army, who have not scrupled to use their position and the military power in their hands to promote these private speculations, and secure a share of the plunder for themselves. That this cotton trade in the enemy's country could not thrive without the direct aid and protection of the Government is evident, because the cotton when bought could not be transported to safe potential outside of the States growing it, except on railroads held and worked exclusively by the Government, and the trains conveying it could not be run save when protected by military escort. But for all this aid afforded to cotton buyers the Government gets nothing—the planter gets his home price under the blockade, say ten or twelve cents—and the documents who through our officers have had the Government and the army to prosecute their schemes, have made their millions of dollars.

Is this nefarious system to be continued, now that our armies are advancing and occupying the largest cotton producing State of the South? It should not be. If the "Confederacy" can find its interest in impressing a million bales of cotton into its service, our own Government would find its interest as well in seizing all the cotton it can reach and holding it for National purposes. Let the planters, if you please, be paid for it, as much as the speculators would pay them. The food and clothing of themselves and families depend on their getting payment. But, inasmuch as the Government liberates the cotton, protects it, and conveys it to market, it is a great wrong that private and selfish speculators should get the profits made on it, and not the National Treasury. It is strange that Mr. Chase, who has been willing to aid and encourage the experiment of growing cotton at Beaufort, S. C., on rebel land, and by the employment of recent rebel labor, has never attempted to improve the opportunity of getting cotton for the Government in the Southwest in a much simpler mode, wherein the profits would be sure and gigantic in amount. Might not Congress amend what is remiss in this matter?

The Loyal Men of the South and the War.—It has been common to excuse the dilatory movements of some of our Generals in the field, by supposing that they were acting in the interest and upon the advice of loyal men in the Border States. The letter written by Gov. Johnson, of Tennessee, to President Lincoln, on the 1st of September, which we copy in another column, will do something to dispel that delusion. He complains in the most emphatic terms of the conduct of Gen. Buell for permitting Bragg to enter the eastern portion of the State, and accuses him, almost in direct terms, with acting in the interest of the Southern Confederacy. The letter is couched in very strong and earnest language, and unquestionably had a good deal to do with Gen. Buell's removal from command.

In this State during the late canvass, it was frequently claimed by Gov. Seymour and his friends that a vigorous, aggressive prosecution of the war would be damaging and unwelcome to the great body of loyal men in the Southern States. A little reflection ought to satisfy every one that nothing can be more unfounded than such an impression. So long as the rebels have control in the South, the Union men are in the most deplorable condition. Their property, their peace and their lives are at the mercy of the rebel leaders—and the experience of Harrison, of Brownlow, of Reuben, and many others who have been compelled to fly for their lives to the North, shows with what terrible and remorseless rigor they are persecuted for their devotion to the Union.

Their only hope is in the protection of the National Government, and that can be extended to them only by the active and permanent military occupation of the country. What they require, therefore, is the most prompt and energetic action on the part of our Commanding Generals,—action which shall drive the rebel forces out of their States, and then keep them out. East Tennessee was at one time nearly clear of the rebels; the Union men were delivered from the immediate pressure of persecution, and were encouraged to extend all possible aid to the Union cause. But Gen. Buell permitted the rebel armies to again gain a foothold there,—made no attempt to drive them out, but concentrated all his forces in front of Nashville, as if the defence of that city was the only point which he deemed of the slightest consequence. The Union men of East Tennessee were, in consequence of this policy on his part, again abandoned to the tender mercies of the rebels, and Gov. Johnson's letter shows what were their feelings at such a prospect.

The fact is, that no portion of our people, North or South, are more directly interested in a vigorous prosecution of the war than the Union men of the Southern States. Everything they have in the world is directly involved in the immediate issue. So long as the rebellion is left triumphant in their vicinity, so long are they at the mercy of men who know no mercy,—and who visit with relentless cruelty, adherence to the Union. We trust the appeal of Gov. Johnson will have weight with the Government, not only in the specific case referred to, but in directing its general mode of dealing with the rebellion in the Southern States.

Destitution in the South.

There was much written in the beginning of the rebellion to show that the South would soon be starved into submission. The fact that the labor of the Gulf States was almost exclusively devoted to cotton, and that nearly all the food consumed was obtained from the Northwest, and the agricultural implements from the Eastern workshops, appeared to make a clear case of it—that with a thorough blockade of the seceded States, the rebellion would quickly die of starvation. For how could a people subsist who grew cotton only, who were not prepared to grow anything else, and who were not permitted to exchange what they had for what they wanted?

The progress of the rebellion seemed to refute most of the theories on this subject. No case has ever occurred of a rebel army starving for food, or being defeated or delayed even, in any important enterprise, from any lack in the Commissary Department. Many of the Union prisoners who were confined at different points in the South, have complained of the poor and scanty food given them, but never yet has there been evidence produced that rebel troops were deficient in flour or meal, or fresh or salt meat. The rebel soldiers fared well enough, whatever the rebel prisoners or the rebel people got.

The consideration of these facts without analysis of the reasons, led to a rejection of the starvation theory, and the public has not recently been tolerant of opinions adverse to the continued strength and resistance of the rebellion, based on the sufferings of the Southern people for food. But the public are likely to change once more their opinions on this subject. While the rebel States had Texas and the scarcely less prolific bayou ranges of Louisiana to draw their beeves from, there was little probability of their ever suffering for meat. And while the State of Tennessee and so much of the States of Kentucky, Missouri and Virginia yielded their corn and wheat crops to Confederate uses, there could be no scarcity of bread. All these sources of supply were undisturbed during the first year of the rebellion.

But now this is changed. Texas and Louisiana are practically cut off from the rest of the Confederacy. Kentucky and Missouri are wholly reclaimed from rebel occupancy, and Tennessee and Virginia have been so seriously disturbed in their industry to allow of the planting or gathering of crops sufficient to supply the great demand upon them. The rebels are consequently in a strait severer than they ever experienced before, and it is no unreasonable anticipation that they are on the eve of frightful destitution of food. Evidence of the coming crisis appears in every part of the South. Flour in Richmond on the 27th of this month commanded from $25 to $27 a barrel. Wheat was $4 a bushel. In Alabama, wheat sells at $5 a bushel. In Mobile, corn sells at $3 50 a bushel, and flour at $40 a barrel. The Petersburgh (Va.) Express says that the Pork market in that city opens at $20 a hundred. It is of no use to try to reconcile these facts with popular safety and well-being. It cannot be done. Flesh and blood cannot stand such crushing exactions. The rebel Government is powerless to make head against them, and succumbs to the monstrous prices,—its newspaper organs venting resentment in fearful maledictions on the hard-hearted speculators who are grinding the hearts out of the people. The appeal for mercy and liberality to the families of men who are away fighting the battles of the Confederacy makes no impression on the cormorants who are holding a high carnival over the necessities and miseries of the community. In the midst of all this exaction, denunciation and destitution, their arises the cry of fearful demoralization at Richmond. The city is patrolled at night by bands of desperadoes who strike and plunder at will. Neither property nor life is safe. The spirit abroad is savage and satanic.

These various signs are but the premonitions of a coming storm. They are proofs of a destitution more severe and alarming than even the Opposition Press of the South has admitted to exist. The destitute have become helpless and depraved, and they have resolved to take what they need; and the number who are so bold and strong as to undertake to right themselves is great enough to bring Richmond under terror. The next three months of Winter in the South will be full of exciting events, and may, in a manner far different from what we have ever expected, end the war, and fill the land with horrors.

How to Fortify New-York Harbor.—We are glad to see that active measures are about to be taken by our Government to put this harbor in a complete state of defence. We do not share the alarm of many on this subject, for we do not believe that any rebel rams are building, either at the South or in England, sufficiently seaworthy to reach this City, or powerful enough to pass our defences if they should reach it. Nevertheless, precautions against such a visitation are always wise, and we shall be very glad to see them provided.

But we trust the Government will bear in mind that the best of all preparations against an enemy is to give him enough to do at home. The best way to defend New-York is to take Charleston, Savannah and Mobile. This ought to have been done long ago. But it must be done now. We have abundant means of every kind. We have a fleet of iron-clad vessels, just ready for active service, which can pass or silence every fort by which any of these places are defended,—and we can spare from our armies detachments large enough to engage successfully any force which the rebels can gather for their protection. Their capture will put an end to the slaughter of our people, and to the clandestine commerce by which the South has hitherto been supplied with arms and munitions of war, and thereby all cavil as to the efficiency of this measure.

Still it will be wise to take full and effectual measures to stop any vessels that may possibly attempt to enter our harbor. We need more and heavier guns upon our forts. We need armed rafts or gunboats that can withstand anything that may attempt to come up the channel. By the way, why cannot the Savannah, which now lies in the East River, and is used as a school-ship, be sent down to the Bay, and be prepared for immediate service there? It need not interrupt her present employment, while she would add considerably to the security of the harbor.

Sentence of Another Slave-Trader.—American participation in the Slave-trade has received another severe blow, in the condemnation of Azmon Hunt, guilty of fitting out the slave steamer City of Norfolk, to five years' imprisonment. All the efforts to save him from this disgraceful doom, on the score of previous respectability, and his only indirect connection with the transportation of the slaves, proved of no avail. He receives the penalty prescribed by law.

Who can say that under President Lincoln's Administration we are not making some sort of moral progress, the war to the contrary notwithstanding? It was just a year ago this month that Gordon was convicted and sentenced to death. We all remember what a sensation it created. It was something new under the American sun, and sounded quite like "a story from the land of dreams." Even good men were bewildered. Merchants had to be coaxed or the departure of consignees vessels; prosecuting attorneys had been lax in their efforts to obtain conviction of the parties taken in the crime; juries had been so open to sophistication, and to necessary influence; and judges had been so prone to stick on technicalities, that the public had come to believe that there was something morally impossible in the enforcement of the statutes against the Slave-trade. Not since the trade had revived had there been an instance of capital punishment; and this was fairly attributed to the contamination wrought upon the Northern mind by the change which Southern sentiment had undergone in respect to Slavery—transforming the institution from a curse into a blessing, from a moral evil into a moral good. If Slavery was the divine thing the South had lately discovered it to be, it was difficult to see why the African Slave-trade was worthy of the terrible penalties affixed to it by the statutes of forty years ago. Active movements were made in Congress for the repeal of those laws, and the standing argument was that they were impracticable. And yet what a delusion it has all proved, under the new dispensation of officers at Washington. Gordon was convicted, and, notwithstanding all predictions to the contrary, was hung by the neck until he was dead. Other trials have taken place, and convictions have uniformly followed where the crime was clearly made out. In no single department of criminal justice during the last year has guilt been so closely followed up and so uniformly punished, when fixed, as within the scope of these same Anti-Slave-trade laws, which were before considered little else than a dead letter on the statute book. These laws are the very laws of all others which American scoundrels are now most inclined to respect. New-York, which, under the old order of things, was fast becoming the recognized seat of the Slave-trading interest on this continent, is now the last spot where any business connected therewith can safely be transacted.

A similar change has taken place in respect to the use of our National flag by the Slave-traders. Previous to the present Administration, that flag was the chosen shelter and shield of all slavers, because we would permit no searches under it. Year after year we exhibited to Christendom the amazing inconsistency of maintaining what we called the inviolability of our flag against interference by our national co-equals, and yet, by this very act, occasioning it to be violated, every day of the year, by men whom our own laws declared pirates—disallowing, as an insult and an injury, a foreign naval officer to step under it on an errand of humanity, and yet inviting the thousand-fold greater insult and injury of a foreign Slave-trader systematically driving under it the most inhuman of all earthly work. For years we previously submitted to this degradation, under the belief that there was no help for it. And yet when the Seward-Lyons Treaty, granting the right of mutual search, was laid before the Senate, it was promptly ratified with entire unanimity; and the people universally accepted it without a murmur. It has now been in operation for nearly six months, and the Government has yet to hear of the first instance in which it has occasioned the slightest trouble or misunderstanding between the naval officers of the two nations, while its practical effect has been to relieve our flag of its former disgrace, and deprive the Slave-traders of their greatest facility in the prosecution of their infernal business.

It is manifest that, so far as Americans are concerned, the African Slave-trade is doomed. Its extinction will be another of the events which will make this Presidential term a grand epoch in the history of the country. The boldness and fidelity of the Administration in this line of duty cannot be too emphatically commended; and every public servant who is aiding in the work—naval officer, marshal, prosecuting attorney, judge or juror—deserves to share in the praise.

The Gaps in the Blue Ridge.—The gaps in the Blue Ridge, through which an army can pass, are seven in number, viz.: Vestal's, eight miles from Harper's Ferry; Snicker's, twenty-four miles from the Ferry, through which passes the Alexandria and Harper's Ferry turnpike; Ashby's, thirty-eight miles from Harper's Ferry, through which passes a branch pike from Alexandria to Winchester; fourteen miles below Ashby's is Manassas Gap, through which runs the railroad; eight miles below is Chester Gap—a road not much traveled passes through it; twenty miles still further down is Thereby Gen. Beauregard which the supplies for Lee's Soldiers.

[illegible] are the Abolitionists things to be left in the rear of an advancing army. It [illegible] and such that the rear [illegible] to the rear of Gen. Pope, and [illegible] Washington. We trust Gen. Burnside has taken all needed precaution to guard against a similar accident in his own rear. His army has pushed forward to the Rappahannock, and we hear now and then of the forces being withdrawn from each and every [illegible]. Meantime Jackson is said to be marching in the valley, just across the Blue Ridge, and may possibly avail himself of some of these convenient gateways to strike at Burnside's line of communication, and cut him off for a time from the Capital.

THE TRAFFIC IN AFRICAN NEGROES.—We give, on another page, an article containing some very valuable details concerning the African Slave-trade, a perusal of which will show the importance of the vigilant measures now being taken by the United States Courts and officials in this City to drive from our midst, utterly and forever, the traffickers in human flesh. The trade has been a stupendous one; and it was from this port that a large proportion of the vessels sailed, and in this City that the executive organizations for the traffic existed. We have the names of over one hundred and fifty vessels which were engaged in the nefarious business during the two years preceding the opening of the present Administration, and forty-five of these craft are known to have landed their human cargoes in Cuba—cargoes which comprised not less than sixty thousand Africans. This fearful state of things is now all happily changed, and during the last year not two thousand negroes have been landed in Cuba, and these by vessels fitted out at foreign ports. The traffic, so far as New-York is concerned, may be considered completely extinguished for the present, and indeed forever, unless the atrocious scoundrels under whose auspices it flourished in our City shall again obtain power.

Much of this good result is owing to the vigilance, faithfulness and courage of Marshal MYERS, under whose authority the work of suppression has been carried on. The extent of that work may be partially measured by the list of arrests made by him, in the article referred to. Among the first arrests was ALEXIS HOAX, merchant, whose case has been closely followed up by Marshal MYERS, until on Saturday last, after having been convicted, he was sentenced to five years' imprisonment. The fall of the foreign slave traffic forwards of the fall of the system of domestic Slavery, of which it was the parent.

SHALL EUROPE RESUME DOMINION IN AMERICA?

The Great Danger of the Rebellion not Justly Apprehended—The Necessity of Colonization by France and England—Their Instinctive Search for Outlets—The French in Algiers and Mexico—The Meaning of the French Invasion.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

THE BAHAMAS, November, 1862.

We need just now great statesmen. Where are they? Some philosophers think that great men are like other productions—the natural growth of the country, and times in which they are needed. Surely they were never needed more than in our country just now. Where are they? But, before we can have great men, great statesmen, we must ourselves be great. The nation is the soil whence they must spring. And if we, the people, cannot rise to just and comprehensive views of our situation, and the relations we bear to our age and world, how can we raise up statesmen—who can solve the great problems before us? I thought of this, when I thought of a great crisis in our foreign relations which the rebellion, if successful, might bring about. I have not seen in any public document or foreign correspondence, the suggestion or consideration of a case, which may, and probably will arise, if the internal war of this country is continued much longer. It is this: that by the division and weakening of this country, a sure foundation is laid for the re-colonization and re-assumption of dominion, by France and England, in North America. I have no doubt the Cabinet at Washington have begun to consider this subject—and have thought it prudent to keep silent. But, it is high time the people begin to consider it, as one of the most important subjects which can ever concern them. It has not been justly considered; for the entire nation has for fifty years considered itself as wholly beyond the possibility of such contingencies. It was, in view of the attempts of Spain to resume dominion over her colonies, and of the Holy Alliance to regulate the affairs of nations, that the famous paragraph of MONROE'S Message, in 1823, was put in, that North America was no longer the subject of European colonization. Neither England, Spain or France was then prepared to throw down the gauntlet, and say the world should be again involved in war, for the avowed purpose of conquest on another continent. Hence the declaration was allowed to pass in silence. Subsequently, this country grew so rapidly in strength, numbers and commerce, that no European Power has deemed it safe to interfere. But we are now placed in a very different situation. If the war continues, our strength is reduced, as to foreign Powers, by full one-half. If the South acquire their independence, the danger from foreign Powers is still greater. Supposing the desire of a powerful foreign country, either to colonize or to conquer in North America, the first need and step in such a proceeding is to acquire a safe foothold, which can be maintained. This would be impossible, if this country was as united and powerful as in 1860,—and would not be attempted. But if the South is able to hold, either by war or peace—for any result (except their subjugation or conquest,) presents the same case—any great power, on the boundary of the Rio Grande—then (at some time or other,) they can at pleasure furnish that foothold to a foreign country. Hence, as I have before stated, the immediate necessity of seizing and holding all the seven states of the South. This is, however, by the way, for I do not believe in any immediate foreign interference.

On the contrary, it is the obvious interest of France and England to weaken the American Nation, by prolonging the war. I am thinking only to ultimate consequences. The main point, which I think is overlooked, is the instinct and necessity of all old nations to colonize; and consequently the instinct of England and France to seize and occupy new territories in Asia, Africa and America—unoccupied land, like Australia, if possible—but for want of that, the conquest of weak and decrepit countries. The Turkey, Algeria and Mexico. Colonization has been the great element in human progress, and it is as much the interest of a great nation to go out of itself, overflowing into other lands, as it is for an individual to seek fortune and adventure. The northern nations of Europe had no statesmen to plan a colonial conquest of the Roman Empire. They did it instigated by the natural desire for new and better lands. Two centuries ago, when England and France began their colonization, no statesmen in those countries would have deliberately planned the conquest of Hindostan, the settlement of Canada, the occupation of Australia, the colonization of Algeria and the invasion of China. It was done, not by plan, but by the necessity of old nations for new outlets. Let us apply this principle to the present position of England and France, for Russia is a new country; Spain has yet room for its people, and the Germans are satisfied with the Northern United States, whose people and habits agree with their own. Looking to the population of Great Britain (twenty-six millions on 120,000 square miles,) and France (nearly forty millions on 230,000 square miles,) with the extreme poverty of large portions of the people, there is an absolute necessity for colonizing their population. England has other outlets and numerous colonies of unoccupied land. But France has not. By the wars from 1756 to 1815, England robbed France of her colonies. This has been the main resentment of the constant tendency of France to revolution—the need of more substance. We may safely assert that nobody sees this clearer than LOUIS NAPOLEON. Hence, the conquest of Algeria, and now the attempted conquest of Mexico.

Veiled under whatever pretence it may be, the French invasion of Mexico is the same thing, on a minor scale, as the English conquest of Hindostan. Algeria has proved a poor speculation, and England and Russia have too firm a hold on Asia to permit a successful French colony. But the Spanish American States, both North and South, offer fair opportunities of French colonization, provided the United States either will not or cannot interfere. But, if we are engaged in a prolonged war with domestic rebellion, or if we concede the independence of the South, we are not only weakened, and for the time prevented from interference, but the South will afford the French a foothold for ulterior operations against the United States on the Rio Grande. If any one shall object, that in this age of humanity and civilization, the French would not be guilty of such flagrant injustice, I reply, what has this age exhibited but a constant series of just such aggression and conquests, to the shame of Humanity and Civilization! What has been the English career in Asia for the last century? Beginning in robbery, it has continued in a series of aggressions and conquests, without any motive but the pursuit of commerce, and without any reason but the pretence of civilization. The flimsy veil which England has set up for her vast colonies and conquests is, I assure you, more than enough to cover a hundred French wars. Besides, as I said, the French nation needs colonies. If, then, we have any statesmen worthy of the name, they will be looking to this small cloud on the horizon. They will comprehend its teachings and its portents. I apprehend nothing either from the rebel war, or foreign interference, or French invasions, if only our statesmen have the sagacity to comprehend, and the foresight to prepare, for the concession of rival and hostile forces. Great historical events in a country depend upon the action of the national mind, or rather, of the statesmen who represent it. If they are like CHATHAM, or FREDERICK of Prussia, or WASHINGTON, they will seize upon opportunities, they will make even weak elements conspire to grand and glorious results. But if not. If they are mere politicians, they may neutralize the strength of a great nation, and undermine the fabric of the mightiest political structures. We must remember that

"Pigmies are pigmies still, though perched on Alps."

A VETERAN OBSERVER.

AMUSEMENTS.

The first week of Mr. GRAU'S season at the Academy of Music was brought to a brilliant conclusion by Saturday's matinée, when "Il Trovatore" was given, with Madames GERMABELLA and MORENSI and Messrs. BRIGNOLI and AMODIO in the cast. The three prima donnas which Mr. GRAU has had the good fortune to present to the public have met with so much favor, and the desire to see them in other works is so universal, that the impresario has wisely determined to postpone the production of MEYERBEER'S new opera until Monday next. In this way there will be additional time for rehearsal, and the public will not be over hurried from one excitement to another. To-night BELLINI'S opera of "Norma" will be repeated, with Madame LORINI as the heroine. On Wednesday Madame GERMABELLA will appear as Maria, in the "Daughter of the Regiment" on Friday, "Lucrezia Borgia" will be produced for the last night of Madame LORINI, and on Saturday the week will terminate with a grand matinée. We are desired by the manager to state that the patrons of the opera will consult their interests by not purchasing tickets of speculators at the doors. Some inconvenience, we are informed, has been experienced from this cause. To prevent misrepresentations, the manager desires it to be understood that a certain number of seats, equal to the average demand for them, is always set apart for the evening sale, and no one need purchase a ticket outside, in the belief that the regular office of the establishment has "sold out" all its vouchers.

The announcements at the various theatres to-night are as follows: At Wallack's the old comedy of the "Clandestine Marriage," by GARRICK and COLMAN the elder, will be revived with all the care that marks these events at this establishment; at the Winter Garden Mr. and Mrs. BARNEY WILLIAMS commence an engagement, and will play in three of their amusing pieces, namely, the "Fairy Circle," "Prince Doloroso" and the "Irish Tiger;" at Niblo's Garden the RAVELS enter upon their last week, and will produce the fairy pantomime entitled "The Golden Egg," and the farce called "Fortune's Frolic;" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music Mr. FORREST will appear as Macbeth in Shakespeare's tragedy of that name; at the German Opera House, BEETHOVEN'S Opera of "Fidelio" will be produced with all the artists of the establishment in the cast, and a considerably increased orchestra and chorus—the famous Arion Society reinforcing the latter in the prison scene; at BARNUM'S Museum the play of "Pauvrette, or Under the Snow" at Hope Chapel, TISSELL'S Panorama of California, and at the Palace of Music, (Fourteenth-street,) and the Hall, No. 563 Broadway, the respective Minstrel Bands of CAMPBELL and GROSSE CRAMER.

BOOTH.—Tragedy and comedy are quite as nearly allied as wit and madness, and equally "thin partitions do the bounds divide." In fact, they are made up of the same ingredients and combinations. Given, a fool and a woman, and it is about an even toss-up whether a tragedy or a comedy will result—none can predict which way the scale will turn. "Romeo" had a deep well of humor at heart, and would have turned out a rare wag had that little affair with "Juliet" taken a different direction; and "Hamlet" manages to crack some capital jokes even on the swell of his anger and revenge. If called on to select a man for the higher paths of comedy, we would unhesitatingly fix on him who most excelled in the frolic walk. Certainly we know no [illegible] Yorick's skull, in "Hamlet." But these are the vagaries who are which the old Dane tells us the poet should be—mere; the tragedians whose tradition adores, and the popular taste sometimes clamors for, but whom the critic very carefully skips, and the playgoer of authentic tastes religiously avoids. Macready, certainly, goes a great way, but on the stage—as well as in the world, which the stage is supposed to represent—sudden emergencies sometimes occur in which brains are both useful and necessary. The hand that can touch the spiritual harp skillfully, waking all its deep tones of passion, should also be competent to thrum the merry guitar of the lighter feelings. And here is where BOOTH'S genius—for genius he has—makes itself strikingly manifest. Seeing him as Iago, one were almost sorry to fancy him rollicking about the stage as Don Cæsar de Bazan, but seen in the latter character, and he gives it so charming a tone, that we almost wish he would confine himself to such roles altogether, and wholly eschew that of the subtle, remorseless villain.

Mr. BOOTH gives depth and tone to all his pictures. Certain it is, he does not tear a passion to tatters, but he portrays the passions very much as they develop themselves in real life. Our friend Richard, of hump-backed distinction, was not a mouthing, ranting braggart. He was cool in demeanor, and polite and careful of speech, rather than otherwise; he would carve you his nephews in the Tower with the unconcerned look and almost air of one who "does good by stealth and blushes to find it fame;" but yet the carving was done as surely as it was silently. We fancy that those who pronounce BOOTH "tame" in this and in other impersonations, if they looked a little more closely, would see that this apparent quiet is but the calmness and concentrativeness of deep purpose and passion—the quiet exterior of a torrent that below is boiling. That he does "not touch the feelings" may be true enough as relates to those who can only be moved when a harrow is dragged over the soul, but we have seen the house very still occasionally while BOOTH played—a calm of silence that was only broken by a thunder of applause.

As Sir Edward Mortimer, in the "Iron Chest," Mr. BOOTH has of late won a meed of praise from those who withhold it from his impersonations of Shakespearian characters. In this play, however, he labors under one great disadvantage—the play itself is so execrable in point of taste, plot and construction, as scarcely to merit the name. The conviction is forced upon us by the text, at every turn, that Sir Edward Mortimer is a fool, and suffers from ill-digestion; yet Mr. BOOTH manages to give the character such an interpretation and rendering that it has great dramatic force, aside from its own inherent weakness. In all his plays, too, he is obliged to suffer the inconvenience of being a star. Stars are isolated, by their immense salaries and emoluments, from very hearty sympathy and support. And here a word about "supports." If a star in the theatrical firmament, like one in the heavens above, is obliged to maintain itself unsupportedly and alone, flashing over the stage as comets do athwart the skies, dragging at its heels a nebulous train of milk-and-water inconsistencies, men and women whose knowledge of propriety in speech is even more limited than their ideas of propriety in action, and whose acquaintance with rhetoric commences and terminates with the letter R—the fault is its own alone. If we ever have a "star" company throughout, where even the supernumeraries who move the furniture about and tack down and take up the green baize which passes current with the popular mind for carpet, shall be men of refinement and education, it will only be when the salaries of stars are lessened, or the whole astral system done away with altogether.

The Don Cæsar of Mr. BOOTH is excellent. The gay, careless, but noble and high-spirited Spaniard, is very different indeed from the compound between fool and ass that other actors have accustomed us to. He is something to watch and to study—mind looks out from the background. Indeed, the closing remark of the foregoing sentence will apply to all of Mr. BOOTH'S pictures. Nature has been bountiful to him in giving him an intellectual cast of countenance and the carriage of a gentleman—youth and beauty he probably acquired by dint of careful study.

Mr. T. MASON JONES, late of Trinity College, Dublin, and an orator who seems to have won the somewhat stubborn heart of the English Press, will deliver his first oration at Cooper Institute to-night, the subject being the lively one of "Garibaldi and the Italian Question." Mr. JONES' powers have been greatly eulogized, and the syllabus seems to promise a comprehensive review of the subject.

Signor RONDINELLA, the composer of "Give to me thy Heart Again,"—a song which Signor BRIGNOLI has already made popular—and many other pieces, has taken up his residence in New-York, and will give lessons in every branch of the musical art, but especially in singing. Signor RONDINELLA'S accomplishments must speedily place him at the head of the profession.

The German Liederkranz, of New-York—one of the most vigorous and excellent of our many admirable Teutonic singing societies—will give the first of a series of four grand subscription concerts at Irving Hall, to-morrow (Tuesday) evening. There will be a full orchestra, and the chorus of the Society, in addition to the necessary soloists—who are also of the best—being Mme. ROTTER and Herr WOLLENHAUPT (violin.) At these important entertainments it is intended to bring out several musical works of great merit, by modern composers, as well as a number of classical compositions of celebrated old masters, works which have never before been performed in this country. Mr. A. PAUR will preside in the orchestra. It only remains to be said that these concerts not only promise to be the best of the season, but the cheapest, the admission being but seventy-five cents, or two dollars for a single subscription to the series of four.

Miss TERESA CARRIÑA, the remarkable child pianist, at whose powers we have recently spoken in the highest terms, will make her début at Irving Hall on Tuesday evening of next week. Mr. HARANOS, the energetic and popular proprietor of the establishment, has taken the child in hand, and under his auspices she will undoubtedly meet with the success to which she is justly entitled. Without any of the precocious smartness of a prodigy, here is a little chit who can play some of the most difficult music of the modern school, and play it, too, with expression, elegance, intelligence and power.

Mr. S. B. MILLS will give a series of four pianoforte recitals at Dodworth's Saloon during the latter part of the present month and December. It is not proposed to confine them exclusively to classical music, but to give also the best illustrations of the modern school.

Mlle. LAURENT, who will be remembered as one of the most pleasant and agreeable artists connected with the late French company, will shortly give a series of readings from the literature of her country. Mlle. LAURENT will introduce excerpts from VICTOR HUGO'S new novel "Les Miserables."

Mr. ROBIN BOOTH commences an engagement at the Boston Academy of Music to-night. The company is composed of the following well-known artists: Mrs. Julia Bennett Barrow, Miss Emily Mestayer, Miss Nina Foster, Messrs. H. F. Daly, C. Walcot, Levick, T. Barry, J. Owens, Marlowe, Wilkins, etc.

Miss BATEMAN, whose tragic powers gained her such laurels at the Winter Garden last season, opened an engagement at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, on Monday evening, Nov. 10. The play was "The Hunchback," and the audience, which was large and fashionable, was enthusiastic in its applause. Miss BATEMAN is ably supported, as here, by Messrs. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., and EDWIN ADAMS.

THE MYERS SISTERS' entertainment on Tuesday evening at Dodworth's Hall was a fine success. The house was full, and the audience demonstratively appreciative of the young ladies' reading and singing. Everything passed off in order, as per programme, excellently well, with many recalls and some beautiful bouquets. (Dr. CLARE W. BEAMES played the piano-forte accompaniments with much care and ability.

Mme. DE LUZZAN, the favorite prima donna of [illegible] Thursday evening, the 20th inst., assisted by Mme. ROSINA CANZIANI, a young and brilliant pianist, who is indorsed by THALBERG and GOTTSCHALK, and has played with the latter in Havana; by Mons. M. LA PANNAZA, a French tenor, of whom reports speak favorably, and by Mr. TARGIONI TOZZALI, as solo violinist. Signor MUSSO will be the conductor of the occasion.

One of the newest attractions at BARNUM'S Museum is a family of Esquimaux Indians, brought from the Arctic regions to this country by Mr. C. F. HALL. They are curious specimens of humanity.

THE NEW-YORK OBSERVER
IS A RELIGIOUS AND SECULAR
NEWSPAPER.
PUBLISHED AT A CHEAP RATE, AS ON THE EASIEST TERMS.
TWO DISTINCT PAPERS.
In Religion it is free from sectarianism, and gives a full, fair and impartial report every week of all matters of church interest.
IN ALL THE DENOMINATIONS.
In Politics it is entirely free from party relations or obligations, advocating great principles with freedom and candor, and giving the fullest and latest information of all the movements of the day.
IT SUPPORTS THE GOVERNMENT
WITH VIGOR, FIDELITY AND ZEAL,
In its efforts to CRUSH THE REBELLION
and restore the Union and preserve the Constitution. It criticises with freedom whatever measures can not adapted to the accomplishment of these ends; but its steady purpose, from the beginning of the war, has been, and will be, to uphold the hands and strengthen the heart of the Government, while it puts forth its energies to protect us against the most unholy rebellion that ever disturbed the peace of any country.
The NEW-YORK OBSERVER is the most complete family newspaper
IN THE WORLD.
In the variety of its Departments,
In the fullness of its Information,
In the extent of its Correspondence,
In the number of minds enlisted in its Editorial and other columns,
In the amount of money expended in procuring materials to enrich and adorn its pages,
In the healthful, religious, conservative, genial tone that pervades the paper,
In its stores of anecdote, biography, poetry, science, art, and general literature, it will strive to outstrip every other weekly newspaper.

GREAT INDUCEMENTS.
The Proprietors of the New-York Observer offer the following valuable premiums for
NEW SUBSCRIBERS.
IN ALL CASES, the NEW SUBSCRIBERS must be those who have not in their own or others' names taken the paper during the past year.

TO MINISTERS AND OTHERS.
The Annals of the American Pulpit, by Rev. William B. Sprague, D. D., are comprised in seven large octavo volumes, viz.:
Congregational ..... 2 vols.
Presbyterian 2
Methodist 1
Episcopal 1
Baptist 1
They contain the biography of more than a thousand ministers, and a history of each denomination, with a statement of its doctrinal views, making a complete library of religious biography and history. The lives of these ministers are interspersed with memorable anecdotes and incidents, and illustrated by letters from distinguished statesmen and clergymen, rendering the volumes as much about the source of instruction and entertainment.
The publishers' price for the seven volumes is $10 50. We will furnish the whole set to the order of any person who will send us TWELVE NEW subscribers with the payment for one year, or any two volumes for first new subscriber, or any one volume for two new subscribers. In all cases the money ($2 50 for each subscriber) must be paid in advance.

TO FARMERS AND OTHERS.
We will furnish the whole set of the following works to any one who will send us fifteen new subscribers—with payment of $2 50 in advance on each for one year—viz.:
American Farmer's Encyclopædia 3 00
Allen's (R. L.) American Farm-Book 1 50
Barry's Fruit Garden 1 50
Bommer's Rural Economy 1 25
Bridgeman's Young Gardener's Assistant 1 50
Buist's American Flower Garden Directory 1 25
Comprehensive Farm Record 3 00
Dadd's Modern Horse Doctor 1 00
Dadd's American Cattle Doctor 1 00
Dana's Muck Manual 1 00
French's Farm Drainage 1 00
Gedick's Fish Culture 1 00
Hetzer's Hints to Housekeepers 1 25
Fleas on Open Air Grape Culture, &c. 1 00
Warder's Hedges and Evergreens 1 00
To any one sending us ten new subscribers and advance payment for each, one year, we will send the Farmer's Encyclopædia, Farm Record, and any five other books on the list, or the entire list, except the Encyclopædia and Record.
For five new subscribers, with payment in advance, we will send the Farmer's Encyclopædia and Farm Record, or any other five books on the list.
For four new subscribers and payment, the Encyclopædia and any book less than $2.
For three new subscribers, the Farm Record and any $1 book.
For two new subscribers, any two books in the list costing less than $3 each. And for one new subscriber, any book costing less than $1 on the list.
These books will be sent by mail or express, at the option or expense of the subscribers.
Every evening devoted to canvassing may secure one or more of these volumes.
They are among the most practical works now published on the subject treated. With this collection of books in his library, neither the beginner nor the more advanced farmer need go further for the instruction desired in any branch of his pursuits.
They are here placed within the reach of every young man in the country without a dollar in money.
Specimen copies of the paper sent free to any address.

Doors open at 7½, commencing at 8.

Mr. Mason Jones's remarkable lecture on Garibaldi and the Italian question, which he delivered in Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, to crowded audiences, and which was so highly praised by the Boston journals:

"Thousands of a class who seldom attend a lecture, were drawn to hear Garibaldi, and were fascinated by the eloquence with which Mr. Jones spoke of the Italian patriot. Mr. Jones spoke with a fervor and eloquence that were irresistible, and his lecture was a most powerful and effective one. In short, he has written all the greatest characters of the present century, with the pen and tongue of a Liberal kind, but they are not such as to offend any class of the community. Now, a study in the science of one of Mr. Jones's lectures would be worth the price of a ticket for the purpose of a lesson in the art of oratory. Mr. Jones is a magnetic by the force of a character that the right of a man's mind of the same way as the hearers of a number of the Boston Theatre, and he has the power of

SECRET DISEASES.

SAMARITAN'S BUT SAMARITAN'S BUT

THE MOST CERTAIN REMEDY EVER USED.

BALSAM COPAIVI AND MENTOR EXPURGATED.

Only one pill to be taken to effect a cure. They are entirely vegetable, having no smell nor unpleasant taste. Circulars free to any one; and those desirous of testing the merits of the medicine can send one dollar by mail, to E. G. OATLEY, Druggist, Second-row, opposite the Astor House.

PRIVATE DISEASES—CURED IN THE SHORTEST TIME, by Dr. WARD, 167 Fulton-st., near Nassau, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or exposure of client. Dr. WARD has been for years a leader in this specialty, treating the unfortunate victims of improper indulgence, and the results of his extensive practice in this country and Europe have proved his system to be the most efficacious and reliable known to the medical profession. Dr. WARD can be consulted on the most delicate and private diseases, and will cure the worst cases in the shortest time. Dr. WARD's Medicines are prepared in his own laboratory, and are free from Mercury and all other injurious drugs. Dr. WARD's Lotion for Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Inflammation, Pain in the Back, Gravel, Diseases of the Urinary Organs, and all Diseases of a Delicate Nature, is a specific remedy, and can be used without hindrance from business. Dr. WARD's Pills, for Nervous Debility, Loss of Memory, Impotency, Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Sight, Nervous Tremblings, Hot Hands, Hot Feet, Pimples on the Face, Blotches on the Skin, Ringing in the Ears, Wakefulness, Dyspepsia, Hypochondria, Mental Anxiety, Loss of Vigor, Premature Decay, and all those diseases which result from the secret vice, are the only remedies known to the medical profession that will cure the worst cases in the shortest time. Dr. WARD's Medicines are put up in small vials, sufficient for a cure, and can be sent by mail to any part of the country, with directions for use, on receipt of the price, $1 per vial, or $5 for five vials. Dr. WARD's Lotion, $1 per bottle. Dr. WARD's Pills, $1 per box. Address, DR. WARD, No. 167 Fulton-st., near Nassau, New-York. Consultation free, and strictly private.

DR. COOPER, NO. 14 DUANE-ST., MAY be consulted on all diseases of a private nature. A graduate of Rush Medical College, and of the University of New-York, he can confidently promise a speedy cure in all cases of Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis, Nervous Debility, and all diseases of a private nature, resulting from the secret vice, or from the injudicious use of Mercury, Copaiba, Cubebs, Injections, &c. Dr. C. has made these diseases his study for 10 years, and can cure in the shortest time. Cases of long standing, and those which have been neglected by other physicians, or improperly treated by them, are specially worthy his attention. Dr. C. is a regular graduate, and his diplomas are in his office. Dr. C. is the only person in this city who advertises the use of Mercury. Invigorating Restoratives, perfectly harmless, and warranted to cure in 48 hours. Recent cases of gonorrhœa cured in full view in 24 hours. Gleet, Stricture, and Syphilis, the only remedies known to the medical profession that will cure in a reasonable time. Strictures of long standing, and those which have resisted the treatment of other physicians, cured in full view in a few days. FROM GRAND JUNCTION.

Incidents of a Journey from Grand Junction—What is to be Seen in the War—Enormous Cotton Fields Opened—Army Movements, &c.

From Our Special Correspondent.

GRAND JUNCTION, Miss., Wednesday, Nov. 12, 1862.

The route from Corinth at present, is by boat, in that once famous "American Gibraltar," Colonel Fremont's battery by a series of spasmodic forwards, backwards, by rails, until this place is reached. I found Columbus much changed. The ugly-looking earthworks along the levee had been removed; the damaged cotton of the railroad and other buildings replaced by roomy and substantial wooden storehouses, while the banks, instead of being monopolized by blue-coats with an admixture of mostly hands-in-pockets Butternuts, were thronged with sharp cotton speculators, shopkeepers and others, who are supplanting the presence of grim war, by the activities of commerce.

Two engines, hitting and pulling, finally got our train to the top of this bluff, and a little later we were thundering southward over the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. I may say here that there is, from Chicago to Mobile, a continuous line of railroad, with the single exception of a break of twenty miles between Columbus and Cairo; and it also may be not worthy of notice that the break between the North and South occurred at this point, over which our railroad extends—Columbus going with the South and Cairo with the North. It may be that the physical binding together of States by rails of iron, has its moral correspondence, for, so far as I can now remember, every railroad which extends from the North into a Southern State, still holds that State to the Union.

The first place of any importance below Columbus is Humboldt, in Tennessee, at which point crosses the Memphis and Clarksville Railroad. The road, although in good order, is not in use, nor is the telegraph line, which, like the railroad track, has been tampered. Humboldt is garrisoned by Illinois troops, under Col. DAILLUE, and is well protected by an extensive series of fortifications. Considerable trade is carried on here in cotton; there being now lying at the depot not less than a thousand bales awaiting transportation.

From Humboldt to Jackson the road runs through an overflowing swamp, whose principal features are pools of stagnant water, funeral-looking cypress trees, and a dense undergrowth of cypress, frosted shrubs and rank grass, among which mortal foot never penetrated.

Jackson is a place of 1,500 or 1,600 people, or at least has sufficient strength for that number, but they are now nearly all vacant. Two months ago, when FAST-GRANT, at the head of GRANT's body-guard, thundered into the town, the inhabitants fled to neutral Tenn., to avoid the fearness and brutalities assumed for them by the merciless, uncivilized Hessians of the North. Old men, women and young children fled as defenceless border settlers fly before the war-whoop of the infuriated Sioux. Nobody remained, scarcely, save the negroes, who, in the advent of the Yankees, had a dim consciousness that hallelujah, jubilee, or some other mysterious blessing, had arrived, whose only intelligible features were plunder or war, a hot fire to toast their shins by, and nothing to do. A few of the expatriated finally ventured, and now from behind barred shutters, watch gloomily the panorama of war, as, with hands deep in pockets, go shambling aimlessly about the streets, cursing in their hearts the Yankee invader, and dreaming of distant happier days for unfortunate Dixie.

Jackson, until Monday last, was Gen. GRANT's headquarters, at which time he followed the advance of his army on its slow but sure march southward. Considerable cotton is being brought here, and, as at other dépôts, hundreds of bales are lying around waiting shipment to the hungry looms of the North. At this point the railroad "forks"—one line runs south to Corinth, and the other taking a more southeasterly course, pushes on to Bolivar and Grand Junction, and thence southward to Mobile.

From Jackson to Bolivar the country gradually opens—the eternal swamps recede and become narrower, hills crowned with beach and oak, gorgeous with the colorings of autumn, succeed the stagnant water and melancholy cypress; lonely valleys with willow-fringed brooks; uplands, varied with crests of timber and fields of corn and cotton, begin gradually to succeed the desolation of waters, until we approach close to Bolivar, where we find ourselves in a country so rich and lovely that we do not wonder that Tennessee claims the expressive title of the Garden State.

Bolivar is a beautiful little place, and in the centre of one of the richest cotton-growing sections of the State. At present it is heavily garrisoned, and is defended by extensive and formidable earthworks, which occupy a most commanding position, and are impregnable to anything less than a siege of the first proportions.

Here one sees the monarch Cotton in all his glory. For nearly a mile along the railroad the ground is covered with cotton to an extent that would make John Bull crazy with envy—cotton, one-half of which would buy his Magna Charta, the patent of his Armstrong cannon, or any other thing which he imagines as belonging to his exclusive possession, or constituting his especial glory.

As far as the eye could see along the roads leading from the country, were wagons, each laden with the precious material, and each waiting its turn to reach the buyer's stand and be unloaded. A more mixed assemblage I never saw—it seemed as if the universe had been raked over, and all the dilapidated darkies, miserable horses, queer harnesses, antediluvian vehicles and sad-looking white men, selected to make up the cotton trains. There came an elderly individual with a gold-headed cane, white yarn mittens, beaver hat, made a score of years ago, clad in butternut pants, white vest, and a long-tailed, high-waisted coat of homespun, mounted upon a bony horse with rope stirrups and a bundle of bed-cord. He is some aristocratic planter—some back country representative of the O. K. and chivalry, and who owns five thousand acres of cotton land, has five hundred "niggers," two sons in the Confederate Army, a wife that "dips" snuff, and a daughter who plays ancient airs on an ancient piano, pronounces "there" "thar," and would not marry a Yankee no more than she would one of her own negroes.

His present surroundings indicate an aristocratic atmosphere. Six mules are attached to a vehicle, which looks very much like Noah's ark, razeed and mounted upon wheels, in which are six bales of cotton. This is only an installment—he has three hundred more at home, and is willing to part with the whole at the comparatively insignificant price of 51 cents per pound, which is the figure at which King Cotton is ruling.

Just behind is another establishment. A broad-brimmed, unshaven, sallow individual, in complete butternut, who has just hidden his shot-gun in the brush, and suspended his operations of bushwhacking the Yankees, while he can better the interests, marshals up to the stand, a creaking old cart, containing two cotton bales of cotton—the entire proceeds of last year's "crop." The whole team looks as if it had been used for a fish-cart in the palmy days of Siloam, and had then been retired from service on account of old age. One wheel have tire of wood, the other has a few segments of the original iron surroundings, interspersed with fragments and patches of wood and iron, until the circumference of the wheel looks like irregular trestle-work. The axletree is a young hickory, altered slightly with an axe from its original form, and comes forward uttering doleful laments over its destiny in being transformed from a thrifty, graceful denizen of the woods to such an unhandsome adjunct of civilization. The team is composed of one very small mule, and one very large horse—the collars are of braided corn husks, the harness of rough hewn hickory, the traces, lines, head-stalls, all of rope, each of different size, from that of a cable that would hold a 74 in a storm to the slim bed-cord, which sustains the cotton mattress of its owner. The driver is blacker than midnight; has a black hat with no brim; a whity-brown coat, with no tails; a butternut pair of breeches, whose legs reach respectively to his knees and his ancles. One foot is encased in an immense cowhide shoe, the other in an old boot, which once on, it would seem impossible to get off, or once off, a matter of impossibility to get on. He walks with his toes so far out that the toes and heels of both feet are about on the same line; is bandy-legged, bull-necked, immense in jaw, small in forehead, and altogether so hideous, stupid and unintellectual, that you wouldn't be surprised to see him place his great paws on the ground, and, on all-fours, bound off to some neighboring timber.

A mile and an ox haul up the next load; six oxen succeed them; a span of emaciated horses follow; an endless string of all the extra equine, bovine and human elements in existence, but never a single case of a fat, well-apportioned team, strong, handsomely painted wagon and well-dressed proprietor, such as are seen everywhere in the agricultural districts of the North.

Two bales of cotton are placed on end, a strong pole laid across their top, which pole forms the fulcrum for an immense lever. The cotton is tipped from the wagons, two stalwart negroes armed with short hooks seize it, and by a few dexterous twists bring it under the short end of the lever to which is suspended a pair of large steelyards. A rope is passed beneath the bands that confine the cotton, and in a moment the long arm of the lever goes down, the short end and the bale of cotton comes up, a negro adjusts the weight, and the next moment it is rolled into line, marked with its owner's initials, and lays there awaiting transportation or the torch of some incendiary party of rebel guerrillas.

The other and only feature of interest to a stranger in Bolivar is its immense number of contrabands. They are there by the thousand—men, women and children—more especially the latter. After leaving Bolivar, we met them in dozens—families, colonies, singly, by couples, on foot, in old wagons, on mules two or three on each—all pushing for the North and freedom. There was invariably an African pater familias carrying a baby, the mater familias with an immense bundle on her head, one or two children tugging at her dress and a half dozen straggling behind.

From Bolivar to Grand Junction the country is an open one and magnificent. Almost the whole distance the road is lined on either side with cotton plantations, many of which have raised crops the present season. Mile after mile we passed through fields as white with cotton that we seem crossing over a snow-covered prairie.

At this point considerable cotton has been burned since our troops occupied the vicinity last Summer, and up to the present time none has been brought in. By order of Gen. GRANT, no civilians are allowed to come further than Bolivar—consequently, cotton brokers have thus far been unable to ascertain what can be done.

Our forces are now extended along and south of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, with their right resting on La Grange, five miles west of here, and their left upon this place. It is not likely that anything of a decisive character will occur immediately—possibly nothing within the next fortnight. A heavy force of cavalry and infantry will leave here to-day to feel the enemy in the direction of Holly Springs.

GALWAY.

THE OCCUPATION OF HOLLY SPRINGS.

Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.

HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS., via LA GRANGE, Nov. 12, 1862.

About seven o'clock this morning, Col. LEE, Chief of Cavalry on Gen. REYNOLDS's staff, took possession of Holly Springs, after a slight skirmish just outside the breastworks, in which four rebels were killed and several taken prisoners.

Up to this hour (9 o'clock A. M.) we have taken 150 prisoners. The Mayor and several prominent citizens have finally surrendered the town to the Federal authorities, and have appointed a Committee to obtain corn and provisions for the army.

Lieut. GEORGE W. BURR, of the Second Iowa Cavalry, has been appointed Provost-Marshal. The forces now occupying the town are the Second Iowa Cavalry, the Seventh Kansas Cavalry, and the Third Michigan Cavalry.

The enemy's cavalry are now in force at Lumpkin's Mills, seven miles below, and our forces are now driving them, killing and taking prisoners.

The enemy will probably make a stand at Tallahatchie.

Our infantry brigades are moving up, and will occupy the town to-night. We are getting fair remounts for our dismounted men.

IMPORTANT FROM NEW-ORLEANS.

Brilliant Operations of the Expedition under Gen. Weitzel—A Battle Fought at Labadieville—The Enemy Routed and Pursued—Upward of Two Hundred Rebels Killed, Wounded and Prisoners.

From Our Own Correspondent.

DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, NEW-ORLEANS, Sunday, Nov. 2, 1862.

By the steamer which last left this city, I reported to you, in a short notice, the fact that the Reserve Brigade, under Gen. WARNER, 5,000 strong, had proceeded up the river and made an easy and unopposed landing at Donaldsonville. I have the satisfaction of saying that, up to this date, the brigade has met with brilliant success, characteristic of all of Gen. BURNSIDE's far-sighted and profound judgment. You will find below Gen. WARNER's official report of the splendid engagement at Labadieville, with a list of killed and wounded on our side. Although the battle of Labadieville is, by comparison, inferior in numbers to many engagements elsewhere, still it possesses all the elements of splendid fighting, and consummate generalship; the command has crowned the Department of the Gulf with glory.

THE REPORT OF GEN. WEITZEL.

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE BRIGADE, BAYOU LAFOURCHE, NEAR THIBODEAUX, LA., Oct. 29, 1862.

MAJOR: I have the honor to report that this morning at 6 o'clock I dispatched Col. BURES, in command of his regiment, (the Thirteenth Connecticut,) BERRETT's Cavalry, and one section of CARRUTH's Battery, down the Bayou Lafourche, to open communication with the city. I have just received a dispatch from him from Raceland Station, in which he says that he has communicated with Col. THOMAS, who is one mile and a half from him. He found at the Station three freight cars, one passenger car, two barbette guns, spiked, (32-pounders,) two 12-pound iron howitzers, in good order, and guns, equipments, &c., scattered along the road.

I therefore propose now, to give you a more detailed report of my operations since I left Donaldsonville. I left this place at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning last, and marched on the left bank until I was within one mile of Napoleonville, where I bivouacked in line of battle. Believing that the enemy would, by means of the numerous flatboat ferries which I knew were in the bayou, probably cross from one side of the bayou to the other, I took in tow a flatboat bridge and carried it with me all the way, and have it with me now. I destroyed every boat I passed as a prudential military measure. It has proved of invaluable service to me.

I moved on the first day with but one company of the Eighth New-Hampshire on the right bank. The enemy's scouts were continually in sight of my advanced guard of cavalry, and just before going into camp one Captain of the enemy was killed by my advanced guard and three prisoners were taken. Immediately afterwards one of the Eighth New Hampshire privates on the right bank was taken prisoner by the enemy.

I started on Monday morning again at 6 o'clock, but feeling that the enemy was in some force on the right bank, I threw over the whole of the Eighth New Hampshire and PARKER's Cavalry by means of my floating bridge, and in this order moved down the bayou.

At 11 o'clock, when I was about two miles above Labadieville, I received the report that the enemy was in force about one mile ahead, on the left bank, and that they had six pieces of artillery. I immediately ordered four pieces of CARRUTH's Battery up, (two pieces were with the rear guard and THOMPSON's was already ahead) and formed the Thirteenth Connecticut and Seventy-fifth New York in line-of-battle to support THOMPSON.

These two regiments formed splendidly, and moved at once forward to the attack, through a dense canefield. I moved on with them, and after emerging from the canefield I received the report, and was that the enemy was in position on the right bank also, and that he had four pieces of artillery on that side. At the same time I received the report that the enemy's cavalry was in rear of my rear guard. I immediately swung my bridge across the bayou, ordered eight companies of the Twelfth Connecticut over to support the Eighth New-Hampshire; leaving two companies of this regiment, one section of CARRUTH's Battery and WILLIAMSON's Cavalry to guard the rear. I immediately ordered, also, that a road be cut up the steep bank on both sides of the bayou for the passage of artillery and my train. I found soon that the enemy on the left bank, after delivering only the fire of its advanced guard, which killed one of my cavalry and wounded another, and killed two horses, had disappeared for some unaccountable reason. Fearing some ruse, I immediately ordered the Thirteenth Connecticut across the bayou to support the Eighth New-Hampshire and the Twelfth Connecticut; THOMPSON's Battery to play upon the enemy's artillery on the right bank, which was firing splendidly upon our forces and my bridge; ordered CARRUTH to cross over with his two advanced sections, and the Seventy-fifth New-York to support THOMPSON and guard the head of the bridge and the front of the train.

I then crossed over, ordered the Eighth New-Hampshire to form line of battle across the road, the Twelfth Connecticut to form on its right, and ordered these forward to attack at once. They had scarcely commenced moving when the Thirteenth Connecticut arrived at a double quick from across the bayou. I immediately ordered this in reserve. Subsequently, as the cavalry guides of the Eighth New-Hampshire and the Twelfth Connecticut moved in different lines of direction, they became sufficiently separated to allow me to throw the Thirteenth Connecticut on the line between the two. I ordered this regiment forward in line of battle. The line thus formed advanced steadily at my command forward. In a very short time the enemy's battery retreated, and also the infantry support. The fight did not last long. I found that the enemy had four pieces of artillery in the road. It was CONRON's Battery, Company A, WARNER's Light Artillery, commanded by Capt. J. RAYMOND (who was wounded and is now a paroled prisoner). This battery was supported by the remnants of the Eighteenth Louisiana and the Crescent City regiments, numbering together about five hundred men. They were lying down in a ditch on the lower side of a plantation road in the edge of woods at Georgia Landing, and immediately on the left of the battery.

I ordered skirmishers at once in the woods to secure prisoners. CARRUTH arrived about this time, and I sent him with one section and PARKER's Cavalry in pursuit. They pursued about four miles, CARRUTH firing upon the retreating forces on both sides of the bayou. I have since learned that SLOCUM Battery of six pieces, supported by Col. CLARK's (the Thirty-third) Regiment of Louisiana Volunteers, was in front on the left bank.

I lost 18 killed and 74 wounded. Lieut. FRENCH, of the Twelfth Connecticut, was taken prisoner before the fight. We have buried five of the enemy, and have seventeen wounded in our hospital, but I have proof that their loss was greater. I took 104 of the enemy prisoners the day of battle, and 42 of them since—total 206; I released them all on parole. The commanding officer of the enemy, Col. J. T. McFARRAND was killed. I delivered his body to some of his brother officers, who were prisoners, and he was decently buried near the battle-field, the Chaplain of the Eighth New-Hampshire officiating. One of the pieces of the enemy's artillery broke down in the retreat. We secured it, and have it now in our possession. All of my command did very well; both officers and men. The Eighth New-Hampshire advanced steadily in front of the enemy's battery. The Twelfth and Thirteenth Connecticut crossed the bridge, formed in line of battle under the very accurate and splendid fire of the enemy's artillery, without seeming to notice it at all. My cavalry has been of invaluable service to me; both officers and men have done splendidly. I wish I had four times the number. The signal corps, also, has been of great service to me.

I crossed over my train and encamped on the battle-field; had my own and the enemy's wounded put in a house which I took as an hospital. I went into camp the next morning, (yesterday,) I moved on down the right bank of the bayou, throwing over the Seventy-fifth New-York and WILLIAMSON's Cavalry on the left bank. I left about thirty wounded of my own, who could not be moved, and the enemy's wounded, in charge of Surgeon B. N. CUMMINGS, of the Thirteenth Connecticut, and left with him provisions, money and supplies, for their care. I entered Thibodeaux at 3 o'clock P. M. without opposition.

I certainly expected a fight at this place. When I arrived a short distance from it, I found from the smoke of burning bridges that they were retreating, and immediately ordered my cavalry in pursuit. They followed as closely as their force would allow, and prevented the total destruction of two railroad bridges, the one across Bayou Lafourche, the other across Bayou Terrebonne. I found three freight cars at Lafourche Crossing, unloaded, one containing arms, shovels and picks, and another containing a lot of guns, ammunition and accoutrements. I also found papers by the side of the road, which were thrown away in their retreat, proving that the enemy had left Bayou des Allemands. In went into camp on Buzzard's plantation, about one mile below Thibodeaux. I will repair the damage on the two bridges to-morrow. The enemy has returned to Berwick's Bay. I send you a list of my killed and wounded; I also send you a list of prisoners paroled. I think it would be well to publish the latter list, as a great many are from New-Orleans.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. WEITZEL, Brig.-Gen. U. S. Vols.

Commanding Reserve Brigade.

Gov. Johnson's Opinion of Gen. Buell's Course.

The Nashville correspondent of the Philadelphia Press says:

I herewith transmit to you extracts from Gov. ANDREW JOHNSON's letter to President LINCOLN, criticising the course pursued by Gen. BUELL while in command of the Army of the Ohio. This letter would have been sent to the President immediately after it was written, had not the guerilla MORGAN cut off all communication with the North.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 1.

To His Excellency Abraham Lincoln, Washington City:

On two occasions I have stated to the President that Gen. BUELL would never enter and redeem the eastern portion of this State. I do not believe he ever intended to; notwithstanding his fair promises to the President and others that he would.

A portion of the rebel troops, it is stated, under the command of BRAGG, have crossed the Tennessee River, above Chattanooga, and are marching in the direction of Nashville. His force is variously estimated at from 30,000 to 50,000. My own opinion is that it cannot exceed 20,000.

Gen. BUELL and his forces are in his front, running from Decherd, on the railroad, to McMinnville and Sparta, and, in my opinion, without much Generals he has under his command, could meet BRAGG and whip him with the greatest ease; entering lower East Tennessee, and turn the rear of the force said to be now before Gen. MORGAN, at Cumberland Gap, leaving MORGAN to march into East Tennessee, and take possession of the railroad, at once segregating and destroying the unity of their territory, and that, too, in the midst of a population that is loyal, and will stand by the Government.

The forces which have passed Cumberland Gap, on MORGAN's right, under command of KIRBY SMITH, entering Kentucky in MORGAN's rear, can and will be met by forces coming to the direction of Lexington and Nicholasville, and whipped and driven back.

I am now compelled to state, though with deep regret, what I know and believe Gen. BUELL's policy to be. Instead of meeting and whipping BRAGG where he is, it is his intention to occupy a defensive position, and is now, according to the best evidence I can obtain, concentrating all his forces upon Nashville, giving up all the country which we have had possession of south and east of this place, leaving the Union sentiment and Union men, who took a stand for the Government, to be crushed out and utterly ruined by the rebels, who will all be in arms upon the retreat of our army.

It seems to me that Gen. BUELL fears his own personal safety, and has concluded to gather the whole army at this point as a kind of body guard to protect and defend him, without reference to the Union men who have been induced to speak out, believing that the Government would defend them.

Gen. Buell is very popular with the rebels, and the impression is that he is more partial to them than to Union men; and that he favors the establishment of a Southern Confederacy.

I will not assume that Gen. BUELL desires the establishment of a Southern Confederacy and a surrender of Tennessee to the rebels, but will give it as my opinion that, if he had designed to do so, he could not have laid down or pursued a policy that would have been more successful in the accomplishment of both these objects.

Notwithstanding the untoward events which have transpired since I came to Nashville, I feel and believe that much good has been done in preparing the public mind in being reconciled to the Government—but if the policy which I have indicated is carried out by Gen. BUELL, all will be thrown away, without the most distant idea, if ever, when we shall recover our lost ground. East Tennessee seems doomed. There is scarcely a hope left of her redemption; if ever, no one now can tell. May God save my country from some of the Generals that have been conducting this war.

Resistance to the Draft in Wisconsin.

DISTURBANCES IN OZAUKEE COUNTY.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel, Nov. 13.

The resistance to the draft in Ozaukee County has assumed quite a serious aspect. Early on Monday morning, the day on which the draft was to take place, processions came into the village of Ozaukee, and paraded the streets with banners on which were inscribed "No Draft." At a preconcerted signal, the firing of two cannon, the insurrection to the Court-house, where they found the Commissioner, Mr. Foss, had just commenced operations. The mob immediately attacked the Court-house. The Commissioner fled, a part of the multitude pursuing him and assaulting him with stones, brick-bats and other missiles, until he took refuge in the Post-office. The other part continued their assault on the Court-House, and destroyed the papers and other machinery connected with the draft. The Commissioner having escaped from the hands of the rioters, they turned round and wreaked their vengeance upon several eminent citizens who had been counseling obedience to the laws. Among those assaulted and beaten were S. A. WEIRS, the County Judge; L. TOWSLEY, the District-Attorney; Judge DOWNS, Register of Deeds, and A. M. BLAIR, a leading lawyer. All these gentlemen were severely injured, and narrowly escaped with their lives. It is reported that Judge DOWNS had his leg broken.

The rioters then commenced destroying private property. The houses of Mr. FOSS, Mr. LOCKING, Mr. BLAIR, Dr. SPRINGER and H. H. HOWE were sacked. The Ozaukee Stone Mills were levelled to the ground. They pursued the proprietor with the purpose of taking his life; but he managed to secrete himself, and afterward escaped to this city. Previous to this they had obtained all the Sheriff's papers in connection with the draft, and destroyed them. The house of Commissioner FOSS was also visited with particular vengeance. The furniture was smashed up and dumped out on the street. Jellies, jams and preserves were poured over the Brussels carpets, and ladies' personal apparel torn into shreds. The mob continued in their high-handed career, and every person who was known to be a peaceful, law-abiding and law-observing citizen was threatened with violence to his person and property. In many cases these threats were carried out with fearful exactness.

The Provost-Marshal-General of the State, W. D. McIndoe, arrived here last night, and accompanied by eight companies of the Twenty-eighth Regiment, about 600 strong, under command of Col. LAWRA, left for the scene of the disturbances in Ozaukee County. The steamers Comet and Bonham had previously been chartered by the Governor, and at 5½ o'clock Wednesday morning, took their departure for Port Washington, with the Provost-Marshal-General and troops on board.

The propeller Kenosha, which arrived here at 4 o'clock Tuesday night, brought information that the mob at Ozaukee had three pieces of artillery, one of which was planted on the pier, and had an elevation commanding the pier, and that they threatened to prevent the landing of troops. To avoid a collision at the pier, it was understood the troops would be landed at Port Ulao, five miles this side, and march into Port Washington before daybreak this morning.

A later edition of the Sentinel says:

The Comet has just returned—6 o'clock. The troops landed at Port Ulao, and proceeded by land to Port Washington, arriving about 7 o'clock in the morning. The rioters were completely taken by surprise, not one of them expecting that anything would be done by the State or United States authorities. Seventy of the rioters have been captured, and are in the custody of Provost-Marshal McIndoe; some prominent citizens of Port Washington are among the prisoners. The destruction is represented as much greater than at first reported, six houses having been gutted; bedding, furniture, and pianos were piled up in promiscuous ruin.

The troops marched to the rear of the town on the west side. Col. LAWRA immediately sent out scouts and extended his lines so as to completely surround the town. Advancing in this manner, the scouts came in contact with some of the rioters, who appeared frightened out of their wits, having become aware of the presence of a body of troops. They rushed wildly from one side of the town to the other, endeavoring to make their escape. But it was no use. The lines of the soldiers gradually closed up, and the rioters were completely bagged—among them the ruts and destruction they had made. In a very short time the soldiers had arrested about seventy, including several women. The prisoners were taken and confined in the Court-house under guard.

We can only surmise what will be the fate of these men. The law provides that all who resist or countenance resistance to the draft, shall be pressed to serve in the ranks of the army during the war. This is a very mild sentence, and will be carried out to the letter.

New-York State Sharpshooters.

This corps, under command of Col. W. S. ROWLAND, has been assigned to Gen. BANKS' expedition. Four companies are now full, and will embark with the advance. By an order of the Adjutant-General of this State, Col. ROWLAND has been placed in command of all the sharpshooters organizing in the State. Gen. BANKS is very desirous that the command shall be filled immediately, in order that it may be assigned to its important position at the earliest possible moment. The several War Committees, and the people of the State, should aid in every possible way to accomplish this end. We suggest that some action should be taken at once to fill up the New-York City company of this corps. The men are to be armed with the best rifles the Ordnance Department can command.

To the riflemen of our State no branch of the service offers such inducements as this. The field officers will be men of great experience in this service.

It is desired that, in accordance with the order of Gen. HILLHOUSE, all persons raising companies through the State should report at once to Col. ROWLAND the state of their companies.

The camp of instruction and rendezvous is at Weehawken—general headquarters, No. 62 White-street.
